A Tense Situation

By Ben A. Thirkield,
The Post Cable Editor

The peoples of the Balkans and Mediterranean countries last night found themselves a few unwilling steps closer to involvement in Europe's war.

A dozen developments, minor in themselves, combined to strengthen the fear of conflict from Gibraltar to the Black Sea, but as it has since last September, the course of events seemed to depend upon the unknown plans of one man—Benito Mussolini.

However, there were definite indications that his intentions might soon become known—but whether this enlightenment would come by military action, or by diplomatic assurances of inaction, remained as uncertain as ever.

Facts and Reports

Contributing to the tangled situation were these facts, reports and rumors:

1. Britain was reported to have asked Premier Mussolini to explain, by May 16, whether Italy intends to abandon her present "non - neutral, non - belligerent" status.

2. Mussolini conferred with Crown Prince Umberto, commander of half of Italy's army. The communique said they discussed "military problems."

3. A few hours earlier, Umberto had spent half an hour with Pope Pius X11, who was reported to have suggested recently in a message to President Roosevelt that the time has come to make a final effort for peace before Italy enters the war.

4. Allied fleet reinforcements arrived at Alexandria, where British officers said they were ready to fight Italy "on land, sea, and air."

Italy Adds Battleships

5. Italy answered with announcement that the second of four new 35,000-ton battleships had joined her fleet. The Allies have but one bigger, the 42,100-ton Hood, but several to match Italy's new dreadnaughts are on the way.

6. Yugoslavia reported that 300,000 Italian troops were in the northern border region. Italy is believed also to have more than 100,000 troops in Albania. Yugoslavia's army may soon reach 500,000.

7. Italy refused to confirm the Yugoslav reports, but Virginio Gayda asserted French and British intrigues have made necessary a "few precautions" in the "territory adjacent to the Balkans."

8. Rumania tightened censorship of outgoing news, and mobilized air raid precautions on an unprecedented scale.

9. Bulgaria's new mechanized army paraded in Sofia, but the

Japan's Gold Source Baffles U. S. Officials

Reserves Shrink, but Tokyo Continues To Pay for Goods

A survey of Japan's financial structure after the drain of nearly three years' war in China indicates that its gold reserves have shrunk to less than $100,000,000.

LEHRBAS

Officials here make that estimate of Japanese-held gold, despite the fact that the Central Bank of Japan still lists its gold reserves at $164,000,000, a figure which has remained unchanged since December, 1938.

Japan paid—largely in gold—$200,000,000 for goods purchased in the nited States during 1939, and gold shipments are continuing to pay for purchases here.

Commerce Department figures show that Japan shipped $166,000,-

Roosevelt Back in Capital

No Indication That Italy Will Join War, Says President

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt yesterday answered with a flat no a question as to whether he had "any indication that Italy is going to move in."

This was one of the high points of a press conference held while his special train carried him to Washington after a quiet week-end at his Hyde Park, N. Y., home.

The President arrived in the Capital at 10 p. m.

The President said he was coming back to Washington a little sooner than was expected because he began to get a case of nerves in these troubled days if he remained away too long.

The Chief Executive will have a conference at the White House today with Senate and House leaders.

He asserted, in reply to a question, that money used by the United States Film Service, which has produced several movies including one of the birth of a baby, represented about as good an expenditure of public funds as could be found.

Reporters reminded him the Senate and House had refused to appropriate $106,000 for the service. He said they had the right to do so, of course, but that the films were of interest to millions.

He remarked that he was not go-

Allies Admit Nazis Sank 3 Destroyers

English, French, Polish Vessels Sent to Bottom By Air Bombing

By the Associated Press

London, May 6.—Germany's aerial power in Norway has sent three Allied destroyers to the ocean bottom off the Norwegian coast within the last week, the Allies announced today.

The destroyers falling victims to Nazi bombers were the 1,870-ton British Afridi, the French Bison, 2,436 tons, and the Polish Grom, 2,144 tons.

Official reports said the three Allied vessels were sunk while escorting troop transports. One officer and 65 men were believed lost on the Polish vessel. Losses on the other two were not given.

3 Trawlers Believed Lost

The British admiralty also said three British trawlers, Penn, Hercules and Leonara, were overdue and had been given up as lost.

Meanwhile, the admiralty stuck by its denial of German claims to have sunk a battleship of the Queen Elizabeth class and a heavy cruiser in the same operations.

But it admitted that the Afridi, forty-seventh naval loss officially announced by the British, was "struck by a bomb and subsequently sunk" during an "insistent attack" by "waves of enemy aircraft."

The admiralty said escort vessels' antiaircraft fire was so effective that two German bombers were shot down and the transports came through "untouched."

66 on Polish Destroyer

The Polish naval staff in London announced the loss of the Grom, by bomb off Norway, with one officer and 65 men believed lost.

The Paris admiralty admitted the sinking of the Bison May 3. Most of her crew, normally 209 men, was saved.

The Afridi was the eleventh British destroyer sent to the bottom since the war began, and the fifth since the start of the Norwegian campaign.

Grom Built in 1937

The Afridi was sunk while convoying troops from Namsos, Norway. She was commanded by Capt. P. L. Vina, who previously commanded the destroyer Cossack when that warship invaded a Norwegian fjord February 17 and rescued British captives from the German ship Altmark. The Afridi was a new destroyer, completed in May, 1938.

The Grom (Thunderer) was completed in 1937 in a British shipyard and had been cooperating with the British in the Norwgeian operations. She carried a crew of about 200. The Poles announced they had accepted an offer by the British government to replac the Grom by a destroyer now being built.

British Sub Captured

Berlin, May 6 (INS).—According to a high command communique today two Nazi seaplanes landed in the Kattegat Channel and captured a 1,500-ton British submarine that had come to the surface after being disabled by a depth charge.

Never before in history had planes captured a submarine, and this was the first time in the war that a belligerent seized such a prize.

Roosevelt Asks Passage Of Hatch Bill

'Clean Politics' Measure Gets 2d Indorsement By President

By Robert C. Albright,

President Roosevelt yesterday urged House consideration and passage of the Hatch "clean politics" bill which was pigeonholed last week by a secret vote of the House Judiciary Committee.

The President's second indorsement of the measure coincided with fresh attacks in the House on the committee's procedure. An effort to obtain reconsideration of the vote will be made at a committee meeting this morning.

Aboard his train en route from Hyde Park to Washington, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters that he hoped very much to see the bill brought before the House, voted on and passed.

The Democratic National Committee and some of his Administration leaders have been reported opposed to the measure. But the President repeated his espousal of the Senate-approved legislation banning political activities by State employes paid wholly or partly from Federal funds.

A petition for discharge of the Judiciary Committee meanwhile passed the half-way mark, with a total of 115 signers before House adjournment. A majority of the House, or 218 signers, is needed to force the legislation to the floor.

Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, who corraled only a dozen new signers during the day, said many members were awaiting the outcome of today's Judiciary Committee meeting, and predicted a rush to sign if the tabling vote is confirmed.

House Republican Leader Martin, who rarely ever signs a petition, said he was one of those waiting. Martin said Republican House sentiment is "overwhelmingly" with the bill, and he felt justified in joining the petition move if the judiciary group fails to act.

Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, obtained House permission to address members for an hour today. Sumners, who has continued silent under fire, is expected to outline his position on the measure and explain the committee action.

Favors Floor Vote

The Texan presided at the meeting which shelved the bill and is credited with arranging, on request, for the secret ballot. Friends said Sumners, while viewing the legislation as an encroachment on States' rights, favors floor consideration of the bill. He did not vote during the committee's secret count.

The motion for committee reconsideration of the vote today will be sponsored by Representative Abe Murdock (Democrat), of Utah. He will be supported by Representative Guyer, of Kansas, ranking Republican member.

A counter move to re-refer the bill to a special subcommittee for rewriting may be made. Dempsey warned that another subcommittee study will not deter his petition

Strengthening of Red Cross Urged for U. S. Emergency

By Lucia Giddens

Although "everyone hopes and many believe that our country will avoid being drawn" into the European conflict, DeWitt C. Smith, national director of the disaster relief service, told a sectional meeting of the Red Cross convention yesterday afternoon that strengthening the agency's program would be a good preparation for a national emergency.

The convention, which will close tomorrow, became the largest ever held here by the Red Cross, when registration yesterday afternoon reached 3,378.

At a special disaster relief meeting, Smith pointed out that experience in handling peace-time disasters paralleled problems of modern warfare, in which masses of civilians are rescued or evacuated, given temporary shelter, food, clothing and medical care.

Earlier in the day, at the opening convention session in Constitution Hall, a letter from President Roosevelt was read, recommending an international agreement to prevent the bombing of civilians.

The President said he recalled "with pride that the United States consistently has taken the lead in urging that this inhuman practice be prohibited."

With grim details of suffering among war refugees in Europe, three Red Cross leaders brought fresh first-hand observations to last night's session of the convention, with a challenge to this country for even more aid.

Delegates gathered in Constitution Hall to hear Ernest J. Swift vice chairman in charge of foreign operations; Malcolm Davis, of Geneva, Switzerland, Associate Secretary General of the League of Red Cross Societies; and James T. Nicholson, director of the Junior Red Cross, who recently returned from abroad.

"The appalling dislocation of national life—the grave problems posed by migration and resettlement of civilian populations living on borrowed time—will inevitably continue to grow more acute until peace comes again to Europe and

The Maryland Primary

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

United States Senator George L. Radcliffe, perhaps the least talkative man on Capitol Hill, won the Democratic nomination for a second term yesterday.

The junior Maryland Senator rolled up a victory of landslide proportions against National Committeeman Howard Bruce, who had chided him for making only one speech in the Upper House in five and a half years.

Radcliffe, a consistent New Dealer until he voted against the Supreme Court enlargement bill of his close friend, President Roosevelt, led Bruce by almost 2 to 1 in the popular vote.

Bruce conceded defeat at 10:30 p. m., and sent Radcliffe a telegram saying:

"You have my heartiest congratulations upon your renomination, and it is needless for me to assure you of my support in November."

Thomas E. Dewey, hard-hitting New York District Attorney, the only candidate to file in the Presidential preference primary, was assured of Maryland's 16 delegates to the Republican National Convention.

However, there was no great rush to honor Dewey. His backers had urged a heavy vote for him to indicate his popularity as the "people's choice." Of Maryland's 242,000 registered Republicans, some 32,289 had voted for Dewey when returns had been received from 731 of the 1,309 polling places, and 4,389 had voted for an uninstructed delegation to the Philadelphia convention.

Apparently some 17,000 persons who voted in the G. O. P. Senatorial battle did not bother to vote for Dewey or for the uninstructed delegation.

Representative Ambrose Kennedy, of the Fourth Congressional District, was defeated for the Democratic nomination for a fifth term.

Kennedy, a prominent and hard-working member of the House Committee on the District of Columbia, went down before John A.

Walter Johnson Holds Big Lead

Walter Johnson, the "Big Train" of baseball, had a commanding lead and appeared to have won the battle for the Republican nomination for a House seat in the Sixth District.

The vote in 183 out of 283 precincts was: Johnson, 5,191; A. Charles Stewart, 3,197.

The old smoke-ball king, who began his political career two years ago when he was elected a commissioner in Montgomery County, was leading in Montgomery, Frederick and Washington counties. Stewart was ahead in his own Allegheny County and in Garrett County. The Washington Post was swamped with telephone calls from men and women interested in Johnson's candidacy.

SEC Charges Illegal Utility Gifts in Politics

Two Subsidiaries Of North American Asked to Explain

By Felix Cotten

The Securities and Exchange Commission, in an unprecedented action, yesterday ordered the $250,000,000 Union Electric Co. of Missouri and the St. Louis County Gas Co. to answer at a public hearing charges that they bribed public officials, made illegal political contributions, and concealed these transactions by falsifying financial statements.

The order indirectly involves the North American Co., since the two Missouri concerns are its subsidiaries.

Edward L. Shea, president of North American, said in New York that he hoped the SEC inquiry would result "in an early clearing up of this regrettable situation."

The SEC charged three of its investigation lasting about a year and a half. In the course of the inquiry, Union Electric employed former Attorney General Homer Cummings and William Stanley, his law partner and former aide in the Justice Department, to represent it. However, it was said last night the two no longer represent the company.

The SEC charges three of its investigators—Herbert S. French, Paul J. Cotter and Harry C. Coles, jr.—had unearthed evidence tending to show that, for a long period of time, the Missouri companies padded payments to officers, employes and others, received substantial "kickbacks" in turn, and paid out large amounts in political contributions, for "influencing the conduct" of public officials, and in various other ways.

These transactions, according to evidence in the hands of its investi-

Schwellenbach Appointment Tempts Martin

Governor May Not Fill Seat, to Run in Fall; Senator Named Judge

Gov. Clarence D. Martin of Washington may not fill the Senate seat of Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, loyal Senate New Dealer, who was appointed yesterday by the President and immediately confirmed by the Senate to be Federal District judge for the Eastern district of Washington.

In tribute to Schwellenbach, the Senate laid aside other business on request of Chairman Henry F. Ashurst of the Judiciary Committee and voted speedy confirmation. Customary reference of the appointment to Committee was waived and the President was ordered notified at once of the action.

Schwellenbach immediately announced that he will remain in the Senate "until the end of the session" and then assume his judicial post. Friends of Gov. Martin, who may himself run for Schwel-

Mercury Hits 85, Warmest of Year; Giraffes Rebel

Summer weather swept into Washington yesterday, driving a short-lived spring before it. Government workers rolled up their shirt sleeves as the mercury topped 85 degrees at 3:30 p. m. to make yesterday the warmest day of the year.

From 1 to 7 p. m., the temperature hovered above 80 degrees. Weather Bureau aides termed the day's heat normal for July, but not too unusual in view of Washington's weather abnormalities.

The forecast for today was partly cloudy and cooler.

The summery weather created a crisis at the Zoo. Four giraffes were allowed outdoors for the first time this year, and later balked at returning indoors to their quarters in the large mammal house. Attendants spent a hectic 15 minutes shooing the play-bent beasts and tempting them with tidbits before breaking up the mutiny.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday prescribed light blouses as uniform from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. beginning today. From 4 p. m. to 8 a. m., medium weight fall blouses will be worn.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

New York, May 7.

AT DEWEY'S HEADQUARTERS

There are banners in Forty-second street near the Dewey bailiwick, but they are not Dewey's banners. His shock troops have the sixteenth floor of a newish building opposite the Grand Central Station, and there's not even a placard outside, nor in the shiny foyer or the elevators with glistening bronze doors.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

It's a building that has moaned a little with empty offices during the New Deal, and consequently Dewey's people have a floor for what they describe as a very modest rental. The floor is divided by glass partitions into some 20 offices, large and small, and it can be subdivided into 30 or 40.

* * * *

Inside there isn't yet a picture of Dewey more than a foot high, despite the weakness of campaign headquarters for pictures of their hero more than life size, like the famous gigantic tinted picture of McNutt, or the 30-foot Hoover

* * * *

But his workers are picture-minded. While I was there one came in showing Dewey looking surprisingly tall and impressive alongside his petite wife in the background. It was quickly sized up speculatively.

"—gadgets for Dewey's cause"

Pride in their hero and an indulgent scorn for his enemies quite properly permeates the suite. I asked whether Kenneth Simpson, New York's national committeeman who recently split with Dewey, had ever entered this sanctum.

"He never set foot here," I was told. "If he had, we'd have to fumigate the place."

* * * *

Next to this pride in their champion, you are a little creepily conscious of an atmosphere of imminence of big things, of history about to happen, of triumphs in an embryonic prenatal state. The air tingles with lofty resolve, like a university before the season's big football game.

* * * *

About 85 men and women staff the headquarters, including a colored college graduate with a gift for excerpting editorials, a switchboard operator with an amazing memory, and a big, calm, tweedy young man with a mustache and a Phi Beta Kappa key who is an expert in analyzing the 200 or 300 letters a day that pour in.

* * * *

Several of these have had other headquarters experience, and some are volunteer workers who, like so many political pioneers, must hope for a reward hereafter.

Later the force may be doubled or tripled, before the zero convention hour.

The mail is increasing, and all the random sample I read were full of enthusiasm.

* * * *

The letter expert divides the letters—some 35,000 so far—into six or seven peculiar categories: Letters from men who head substantial firms, from the heads of public-spirited organizations, from heads of smaller businesses, whose names are on the letterheads, from individuals with and without typewriters, and category 7, which embraces the "nut" or lunatic fringe mail. "This oe isn't so big," said the expert.

"—the artillery is drawn up"

Each letter gets a vigorous, personalized reply, often signed with Dewey's name, no mere form letter, but something with a hip-hip-hurrah and a rallying cry.

But the heart of headquarters is the mimeograph room, with several machines drawn up like field pieces, and expert girls to man them. When Dewey writes a big speech, reinforcements are rushed in from outside, the force there is tripled, and copies are shot across the land.

* * * *

So far a large share of the callers, besides those offering their services, consists of salesmen for campaign gadgets like balloons of all sizes and shapes, red, blue and green feathers for hatbands bearing Dewey's name, and ready-made campaign literature complete with slogans and cartoons, and of course campaign buttons.

Private, neutral initiative is ready to help Dewey as well as the next one.

Most of the big corner offices, the ones with the bigger desks and leather chairs, are empty, as their occupants attack on the front-line sectors.

Even in her absence the spirit of indomitable Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms dominates the place, though she is listed as co-manager while, Russel Sprague is manager.

* * * *

Off in one corner is the club division, equipped with gay wicker furniture and a little more emphasis on rugs. This is where ladies from far and wide, and a few men, come to discuss tactics, strategy and maybe finance, and for reinvigoration.

* * * *

Dewey himself comes in occasionally from his district attorney offices nearby, and the place becomes dynamic. But mostly it is poised and waiting now, in the lull before the battle, waiting for the final melee in which Americans choose their President.

Court Upholds Convictions Of Oil Trust

Combination to Fix Prices Held Illegal By High Tribunal, 5-2

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

In a decision lending strength to the antitrust drive of the Department of Justice, the Supreme Court yesterday declared that price-fixing combinations of any sort are illegal under the Sherman Act.

Overruling a circuit court opinion, Justice Douglas spoke for a 5-to-2 majority of the highest tribunal in upholding the conviction of 12 oil companies and 5 individuals who had been found guilty of violating the antitrust law in Wisconsin. Justices Roberts and McReynolds dissented, while Chief Justice Hughes and Justic Murphy took no part in the decision.

The case, one of the most important in Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold's warfare against combinations in restraint of trade, involved Socony-Vacuum, Continental, Pure Oil, Shell and other major oil companies.

Not Ruling on Wisdom of Act

In his decision, the youngest Supreme Court justice maintained that the Sherman Act provides that "a combination formed for the purpose and with the effect of raising, depressing, fixing, pegging or stabilizing the price of a commodity in interstate or foreign commerce is illegal per se."

Irrespective of whether the particular scheme results in "reasonable" prices or is intended to lessen abuses of competition, "any combination which tampers with price structures is engaged in an unlawful activity," said Justice Douglas.

The former Yale Law School professor said the court has no right to determine "whether or not particular price-fixing schemes are wise or unwise, healthy or destructive."

Congress has not permitted "the age-old cry of ruinous competition and competitive evils to be a defense to price-fixing conspiracies," he declared. Neither "genuine or fancied competitive abuses" nor "good intentions" can serve as legal justification for such schemes, he said, adding that if any change is to be made in this rule, "it must be done by the Congress."

The fact that the oil prices in the present case were fixed "at the fair going market price" is immaterial, the Court held, pointing out that "in terms of market operations, stabilization is but one form of manipulation."

If the reasonableness of prices became an issue in price-fixing cases, the Sherman act "would soon be emasculated," he said.

For over 40 years, said Justice Douglas, "this court has consistently and without deviation adhered to the principle that price-fixing agreements are unlawful per se under the Sherman Act and that no showing of so-called competitive abuses or evils which those agreements were designed to eliminate or alleviate may be interposed as a defense."

But Justice Roberts, in the dissenting opinion, argued that a combination resulting in price rises was not of itself a violation of the law.

"Concerted action to remove a harmful and destructive practice in an industry, even though such removal may have the effect of raising the price level, is not offensive to the Sherman Act if it is not intended and does not operate unreasonably to restrain interstate commerce," he said.

The criterion of legality has always been not the raising of prices but the restraint of commerce, declared Justice Roberts.

The contention that Federal officials knew of the price-raising methods employed by the oil companies is no defense, said Justice Douglas. "Though employes of the Government may have known of those (buying) programs and winked at them or tacitly approved them, no immunity would thereby have been obtained," he said.

On one point, both majority and minority opinions agreed—and that was that Government counsel had exceeded proper bounds in argument to the jury. However, while the majority felt that the "undignified and intemperate" statements were not sufficient grounds for setting aside the verdict, the minority thought they were.

Long Opinion

Some of the appeals to "class prejudice" at the trial "do not comport with the standards of propriety to be expected of the prosecutor," said Justice Douglas.

Justice Douglas' 67-page opinion, was one of the longest handed down in recent years.

The defendents had allegedly engaged in a program from 1933 to 1936 of purchasing surplus gasoline from independent refineries to prevent prices from sinking too far. As a result, said the court, "prices rose and jobbers and consumers in the Mid-Western area paid more for their gasoline than they would have paid but for the conspiracy."

Antistowaway Bill Is Passed by House

Nice Defeats Broening

Former Gov. Harry W. Nice won the Republican nomination for United States Senator over former Mayor William F. Broening. Nice was leading in Baltimore and he appeared to have made almost a complete sweep of the counties.

At midnight, on the basis of 639 out of 1,288 precincts, the vote was:

Nice, 24,304 votes; Broening, 18,630 votes.

Democrats outnumbered Republicans better than 2 to 1 in the registration figures, and Nice was given no chance to defeat Radcliffe unless there should be a Republican landslide in November.

The victory of Radcliffe over Bruce was expected to make his two chief backers—Senator Millard E. Tydings and Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore—the dominant Democratic figures in Maryland.

Tydings Boosted

One result may be that the Democratic State convention will make Tydings a "favorite son" candidate for the Presidency.

Mayor Jackson would seem to be in a fair way to realize his long-standing ambition to be Governor of Maryland in 1942. He was defeated for the gubernatorial nomination in 1938 by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, who was Bruce's chief backer in yesterday's primary.

The midnight figures on the Radcliffe-Bruce fight, with 756 out of 1,288 precincts in, were:

Radcliffe, 115,368; Bruce, 64,314.

Radcliffe swept all six Baltimore election districts, which have a total of 42 votes in the Democratic State convention where the nomination actually will be made. He had won or was ahead in 11 counties with a total of 50 votes. Thus he was assured of 92 votes in the convention—17 more than the 75 necessary to win.

Returns from the six Congressional districts follow:

Representative David J. Ward, 8,695; Dudley G. Roe, 7,396; Thomas F. Johnson, 5,093; H. H. Balch, 1,720; Lewis C. Merryman, 195; E. Moore Lee, 235.

First District, Republican (79 of 195).

Robert F. Duer, 2,662; William H. Lloyd, 1,298, and F. Kirk Maddrix, 269.

Representative William P. Cole, 23,487; Charles J. Wells, 13,621; John D. C. Duncan, 1,765.

Thomas F. Brown, 4,980; Irving H. Metzger, 2,608.

Third District, Democrat (103 of 104):

Thomas D'Alesandro, 15,921; Vincent L. Palmisano, 14,147; John G. Callan, 4,098; John K. Kenney, 665; Alexander J. Lane, 493; George D. Iverson, 251; Michael J. Schap, 164.

Third District, Republican (103 of 104):

John A. Jaetzke, jr., 3,344; Howard E. J. Harding, 2,900.

Fourth District, Democrat (complete):

Fourth District, Republican:

Daniel Ellison, 7,721; William J. Stocksdale, 4,992.

Fifth District, Democrat, (97 of 197):

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, 10,993; Dr. John William Klemm, 1,480.

Fifth District, Republican: John N. Torvestad (uncontested).

Walter Johnson, 2,832; A. Charles Stewart, 1,768; Robert B. Kimble, 794; Frank R. Long, 179.

Sixth District, Democrat (uncontested): William D. Byron.

The E. Brooke Lee organization carried Montgomery County for Bruce, but the vote was close. It was Bruce, 6,692; Radcliffe, 5,963.

In Prince Georges County 62 of the 68 precincts there gave Bruce 4,932, Radcliffe 3,675.

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, of course, easily won the Democratic nomination for a second term, defeating the "perennial candidate," Dr. John William Klemm. Thirty-seven polling places out of 197 gave: Sasscer, 3,373; Klemm, 806.

The counties in which Radcliffe was leading, together with their votes in the convention, follow:

Anne Arundel, 7; Baltimore, 7; Calvert, 3; Caroline, 3; Carroll, 5; Charles, 3; Harford, 5; Talbot, 5; Wicomico, 5; Worcester, 4, and Dorchester, 4.

Bruce carried Montgomery, 6, and was ahead in Allegheny, 7; Howard, 3; Prince Georges, 7; St. Marys, 3; Somerset, 4; Washington, 7; Ganett, 4; Kent, 3; Queen Anne's, 3; and Somerset, 4.

This would give him 57 convention votes.

Hyattsville Election

Without a candidate for town council when Robert Plitt withdrew on account of the Hatch Act, voters in the Fourth Ward of Hyattsville, Md., elected William M. Miller, writing his name on 125 ballots. The town voted, 405 to 228, to permit bowling after 2 p. m. Sundays.

Other members elected to council were Howard A. Harrison, 196, over the incuumbent, Thomas E. Arnold, 156, in the First Ward; Walter Alexander, unopposed in the Second Ward, and H. Wilson Spicknall, 238, over Dr. Ray A. Vawter, 125, in the Third Ward. Town Treasuurer William A. Shepherd was reelected to serve his thirty-first year.

Idaho Votes for Dewey

Lewiston, Idaho, May 6 (AP).—The Idaho delegation to the Republican National Convention was instructed today to cast the State's eight votes for the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey for the Presidency. The vote instructing the delegates was 133 to 68.

The delegation was directed "so to continue to vote so long as in the judgment of the delegates, Mr. Dewey shall have a reasonable chance for nomination."

Only once before in Idaho's 50 years of Statehood—in 1936 when the late William E. Borah was a candidate for the Presidential nomination—has a Republican delegation gone instructed to a Republican national convention.

Schwellenbach Appointment Tempts Martin

Governor May Not Fill Seat, Studies Race; Senator Named Judge

lenbach's seat in November, expect the Governor to allow the seat to remain vacant for the short remainder of his term, until a full-term successor is named in the fall.

Gov. Martin, a conservative Democrat often out of sympathy with the Administration, has been debating whether to seek a thir dterm as Governor or a first term in the Senate. Friends think he has his eye on the latter. He is said to feel that appointment of a successor to Schwellenbach would amount to little more than conferring the title and salary of Senator on the man named, since the Senate will not be in session during the incompleted portion of Schwellenbach's term.

Others pointed out that if Martin were planning to seek the Senate nomination, it would not help his case to name an interim Senator. Stephen Chadwick, anti-Administration Seattle Democrat; Lacy Murrow and Harry Hughes, members of Martin's State administration; Joe Drumheller, member of the Washington State Legislature; George Gannon, former State WPA administrator, and Ben Kizer, Spokane attorney, had been discussed as possible appointees.

If Martin seeks the long-term nomination, he must compete in an open primary. Representatives Magnuson and Knute Hill (Democrats), of Washington, have been mentioned as possible candidates.

As five States prepared to go to the primary polls today to shed new light on campaign trends, Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee called a conference of Republican State chairmen from Seaboard States to discuss campaign routine here tomorrow.

The meeting was expected to be the first of a series of such conferences as Hamilton sought advice on the committee's technical activities. It was stressed that candidates, platforms and convention arrangements would not be dicussed.

Third-term interest centers today on California's primaries, where Vice President Garner is matched in another delegate contest against a "harmony" slate pledged to President Roosevelt. Four competing slates, including one "ham and eggs" ticket, complicated the primary.

Speaker Bankhead was expected to win Alabama's "favorite son" indorsement in that State's primaries today, while South Dakota is likely to pick uninstructed delegates, favorable to Postmaster General Farley. Florida likewise will select an uninstructed slate predominantly for Roosevelt, but with some Garner strength. Indiana will nominate Congressional candidates and pick a Democratic delegate slate favorable to Federal Security Administrator's Presidential candidacy.

New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, meanwhile, yesterday walked off unopposed with Maryland's 16 Republican Convention delegates, and also annexed the slate of eight named by the Idaho Republican State Convention.

Assurances that the Senate's Campaign Committee now having investigators in five States will not be a "snooping" or "smearing" body were given in a radio address last night by Chairman Guy M. Gillette. Gillette said the commttee will not let itself be used to "wash dirty linen," but "will investigate each and every complaint laid before it which seems to have some substantial basis of fact."

In asking immediate confirmation of Schwellenbach's appointment, Senator Ashurst highly praised the Washington Democrat. Senator Burke (Democrat), of Washington, joined in the tribute. Senate Minority Leader McNary, who normally insists on Committee consideration of all appointments, agreed to waive his objections in Schwellenbach's case.

G. O. P. Desires 'Return to '20s,' McNuttCharges

FSA Chief Predicts Democrat Landslide At November Election

By the United Press

Detroit, May 6.—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator and a potential Democratic Presidential candidate, charged tonight that Republicans desire a return to "those deceptive years of the twenties" when, he said, America had no more economic freedom than Germany, Italy or Russia.

"Both production and distribution and both commercial and investment banking were ruled by monopolies and a sinister combination of finance," he said in defending President Roosevelt's Administration and predicting Democratic victory in the November elections.

"Labor and consumers were exploited, investors and independent businessmen were helpless. Business was regimented then, but it was not by the Government. It was regimented by powerful groups who 'liquidated' nonconformists with a ruthlessness that matched that of any European dictator."

McNutt, on leave of absence from his Federal post for a speaking tour, addressed a Democratic rally in the home state of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, both candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination.

He contended that a measure of Government control over business was needed to insure proper competition, and added:

"Democracy represents a political society designed to combine the best elements of a free economic order and a regulated economy. The great hazard involved is that of a house divided against itself, with the forces of Government pulling in one direction and the forces of business and commerce pulling in another."

McNutt said that although "some mistakes" had been made and business and Government had misunderstood each other, the "overwhelming majority of businessmen recognize the progress that has ben made and are willing to cooperate fully in bringing about complete prosperity."

D. C. Supply Bill For '41 Up Today In Senate Group

The Senate subcommittee on District appropriations will meet today to mark up the 1941 District supply bill, Senator John H. Overland (Democrat), of Louisiana, said yesterday. The measure probably will be called up in the Senate later this week.

An increase of at least $800,000 in the total appropriations is expected to be made by the subcommittee in view of Senator Overton's recommendations that all income tax collections be anticipated for the fiscal year in which the returns are made.

Chairman William H. King of the Senae District Committee, called a meeting of the committee for 10:30 a. m. Thursday to consider bills on the calendar. These include the Capper bill to regulate the election of delegates to the national political conventions, and House bills to regulate the practice of dentistry and podiatry.

Or are YOU Getting Bald?

BLONDES with healthy scalps have 140,000 hairs; red-heads only 90,000; brunettes 120,000—and the average healthy head has 121,630 hairs. Baldness comes when your scalp sheds more hair than it is able to re-grow.

Thomas can help you keep those 121,630 hairs by ridding your scalp of any of the 14 local conditions which cause 90% of all baldness. For 20 years Thomas treatment has been overcoming dandruff, stopping abnormal hair-fall, and promoting hair growth on thin and bald spots. This precise, reliable method can help you too, to retain or regain a good head of hair. Call today for free consultation and a free scalp examination.

Trucking Union Is Acquitted In Trust Case

Justice Letts Orders Directed Verdict Clearing Teamsters

Organized labor emerged unscathed from its first prosecution under the antitrust laws yesterday when Justice F. Dickinson Letts ordered a District Court jury to acquit the local teamster union and four of its officers of charges of conspiracy to tie up building projects in Washington.

Justice Letts found that the Government evidence presented since the trial began April 24 failed to show that the teamsters acted with criminal intent in calling the strikes which delayed $4,000,00 worth of Govrnment construction projects.

The judge declared that h was instructing return of the not guilty verdict for "elementary reasons" and that he was not passing on either the liability of labor organizations to prosecution under the Sherman act, or the legality of jurisdictional strikes.

The Government, represented by Walter R. Hutchinson and James Hayes, special assistants to the Attorney General, declared that the teamsters called strikes to enforce the collection of dues and the making of union contracts for drivers of concrete mixer trucks. These workers also were claimed by the operating engineers union.

Joseph A. Padway, American Federation of Labor general counsel, contented the alleged jurisdictional strikes were impelled by disputes over wages, hours and working conditions.

Justice Letts held that the evidence of the calling of the strikes was as consistent with innocence as with guilt of the union men and that he was therefore obliged to hold that the Government had failed to establish a prima facie case.

Exonerated by the directed verdict were Local 639 of the teamster union, Charles J. Bell, its president; Linwood A. Trainham and Aubrey Z. Stream, secretaries, and Stuart M. Keyser, business agent.

A Department of Justice spokesman said the record of the case would be studied before it was decided whether the Government would seek to appeal.

Both Padway and William Green, A. F. L. president, hailed the decision.

Green said the ruling was "a distinct victory for the A. F. L. It should demonstrate to the entire country the truth of our contention that Assistant Attorney General Arnold, chief of the antitrust division, has gone far afield in seeking to proscribe the lawful activities of labor unions by the filing of wholesale indictments under the antitrust laws."

Two Men, Unidentified Woman Killed by Autos in D. C. Area

A Rockville (Md.) businessman, an Alexandria (Va.) night watchman, and an unidentified woman about 35, were yesterday's additions to the death toll from traffic accidents in the District area.

Charles E. Petty, 50, the watchman, was knocked down as he crossed Powhatan street near Bashford lane on his way to work. An inquest will be held at noon today in the Alexandria police court. Police said the driver of the car was Irving Shapiro, of Atlanta, Ga., a tourist returning home from Washington.

William J. Keeling, 36, died early yesterday in Emergency Hospital of a fractured skull and internal injuries suffered last Wednesday when his car struck an abutment at the Virginia approach to Arlington Memorial Bridge.

The woman was the victim of an accident early yesterday on Central avenue, about a mile from the District line in Maryland. Police said she was struck by an automobile operated by William Tyler, colored, 25, of 514 M street northwest, who was arrested and released on $500 bond on a charge of reckless driving.

The woman was taken to Casualty Hospital by a motorist. She suffered internal and head injuries and died at 10 a. m. The body was taken to the morgue, where officials hope to establish identity through a wedding ring bearing the inscription, "R. T. C. to M. E. E."

Tyler told Prince Georges County police that the woman darted out in front of his car and he was unable to swerve in time to avoid striking her.

Morgue officials described the woman as about 5 feet, 3 inches tall, weighing 125 pounds, with dark eyes and brown hair. She was wearing a black suit with fur cuffs and a white satin blouse.

Joan Van Allen, 5, of 652 Morris place northeast, was injured yesterday when she ran out from between two parked cars in front of 642 G street northeast into the side of a light sedan.

At Casualty Hospital she was treated for multiple abrasions. The driver of the car, Byron T. Stanner, 35, of 2016 Perry street northeast, was not held.

American Attache In Berlin Coming To Report on War

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, May 6.—Alexander C. Kirk, the American Charge D'Affaires in Berlin, is scheduled to leave this week for Washington via Rome, it was learned tonight. Though the journey to the United States is described as in the line of "routine home leave," it comes at a time to attract interest.

The State Department apparently desires to secure from Mr. Kirk a detailed picture of the situation after the German invasion of Denmark and Norway as seen from a Berlin post of observation.

As the next ranking officer in the embassy, Donald R. Heath, first secretary, is expected to serve as charge d' affaires in Mr. Kirk's absence.

Methodists Ask War Sale Curb in U. S.

Conference Urges A 'Moral Embargo' Against Aggressors

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., May 6.—The Methodist Church today advocated a "moral embargo" against shipment of scrap iron, cotton, crude oil, coffee and other "war materials" to aggressor nations, as 776 delegates ended a ten-day general conference.

They refused to ask the United States Government to enforce apositive embargo through laws, for fear it would get this country into war.

Bishop Ralph A. Ward, of Chengtu, China, said such a proposition was "too vague" and added, "A moral embargo must be implemented if it is to be more than pious phrases."

But Dr. Ernest F. Tittle, of Evanston, Ill., argued the present "moral embargo" against exportation of airplane parts worked out fairly well. He said, "A positive embargo might drive Japan into alliance with Russia; cause Japan to seize the Dutch East Indies and actually declare war on China; result in all Americans being driven out of China, and in the United States becoming involved in an Asiatic war."

Dr. William R. Johnson, a missionary assigned to the Kiangsi Province of China, led an unsuccessful fight to have the church favor positive embargo.

Arline Judge Brands Wedding Report a 'Gag'

Mann Snares Rare Potto In Jungle

Many Specimens Captured by Party, Smithsonian Says

From the Liberian jungle comes word that Dr. W. M. Mann, leader of the Smithsonian-Firestone expedition after wild animals, has captured one of the weirdest of creatures, the potto.

A Potto

Dr. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park here, surrounded a section of jungle with a cordon of 1,200 natives and captured many fine specimens, according to a radiogram to the Smithsonian Institution.

Among these was a Liberian antelope. In the region, 120 miles east of the Atlantic Coast, Dr. Mann secured a Liberian gian rat—a rodent more than 2 feet in length, which inhabits the canebrakes; a number of duikers, or "four eyes," which are tiny antelopes, and many rare types of reptiles and insects, which will go to the United States National Museum.

The potto was said to be about the size of a squirrel. It has soft yellow fur and protruding, yellow, perpendicular eyes. In the dark of the jungle nights, these shine "like malevolent witch lights," the institution related.

U. S., Imbrie Estate Settle Claims Case

Widow Considers Adjustment 'Moral' Victory for Her

Government claims against the estate of Maj. Robert W. Imbrie, slain vice consul, for $1,325, were settled for 50 per cent yesterday and the jury was discharged by Justice James M. Proctor.

Maj. Imbrie's widow, Mrs. Katherine G. Imbrie, who was named defendant because she was in charge of the estate, said she considered settlement a moral victory.

The Government, represented by Mrs. Grace Brown Stiles, assistant district attorney, asserted that the claims represented expenditures by Maj. Imbrie which were not approved by auditing authorities. Mrs. Imbrie claimed many of the expenses were incurred when her husband was on secret missions for an American High Commission headed by the late Rear Admiral Mark H. Bristol.

Maj. Imbrie was killed by a mob at Tejeran, Persia, in 1924. The American Government collected from the Persian government, and turned over to Mrs. Imbrie, an indemnity of $60,000 for her husband's death and $30,000 for injuries she suffered.

Little Red Hen at Lorton Lays a Great Bi-i-i-g Egg

There was a great cackling by a little red hen in the barnyard of L. K. Clark, R. F. D., No. 1, Lorton, Va.

The hen had a right, having laid the principal ingredient of an omelet for six.

Ordinarily, in barnyard practice, this is a feat for no fewer than three, most often four hens.

The egg was 8 inches around its largest part and weighed 7 ounces. Its length was 9½ inches.

Such a thing the countryside had seldom heard of. E. N. Williams, P. O. Box 301, Alexandria, Va., placed the big egg beside one of those eggs any old hen can lay, the 24-ounce per dozen egg. Then, what the Rhode Island Red hen had laid became comparatively evident.

Williams photographed the egg. The hen was away, preening herself and didn't get in the picture. Williams said that Clark intended blowing out the egg and keeping the shell for souvenir. It won't be hatched. Science won't know what potentialities of offspring are inside.

Mrs. D. F. Davis Will Succeed Miss Boardman

Red Cross Volunteer Services Director Plans to Retire

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, whose name has become synonymous with volunteer services of the American Red Cross during her 40 years of work in that field, is withdrawing from active direction of the Volunteer Special Services, it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, of Washington, has been appointed to succeed her as national director of these services, it was announced after the meeting of the central committee of the Red Cross yesterday.

The volunteer services, which Mrs. Davis will head, were created and enlarged under Miss Boardman's direction. She said yesterday it would be difficult to estimate closely the number of persons engaged in this national volunteer work, but that it undoubtedly would run into hundreds of thousands.

Miss Boardman will continue as secretary of the American Red Cross, a post to which she has been re-elected each year since 1919.

Mrs. Davis' leadership in volunteer work has been shown in her service as vice chairman of these activities for the District of Columbia Chapter which has produced thousands of garments and surgical dressings for war relief in Europe. She was Mrs. Pauline Morton Sabin, of New York, before her marriage to Mr. Davis, the former Secretary of War and former Governor General of the Philippine Islands.

Asia," Swift said. "And even after peace the world will look to us for help—and then, as now, we must not fail," he added, pointing out the responsibility of the American Red Cross as "the largest of all Red Cross societies."

Route to Finland Needed

Among immediate problems he pointed out that "ways must be devised to get aid to Finland through the walls of conflict that surround Scandinavia."

Nicholson, who has recently returned from six months in Europe as a delegate of the Red Cross, reported on the complications of getting relief to people in stricken areas, particularly among the Poles.

He described the working out of the plan, which the German government accepted, for the American Red Cross to be directly associated with the German Red Cross in the distribution of aid to the Poles, with no discrimination because of race, politics or religion.

"It can now be reported that once those provisions were accepted by the German government, they were fulfilled," Nicholson said.

Soviets Refuse Aid

Nicholson said the condition of the Poles in Soviet-occupied territory "can only be imagined, for all attempts to assist them have failed in the absence of even replies from inquiries addressed to Soviet officials. Perhaps the Soviet ideology provides no place for private relief."

In the general government, the central portion of Poland, "all districts need far more relief assistance than now seems to be available," Nicholson said.

In Warsaw alone, he said, it is estimated that about one-fourth of the population lacks adequate food. He told of the "pinched faces of children, the emaciation of many of the aged."

"Nevertheless Polish and Jewish leaders in all places visited were clinging tenaciously to the hope of survival. In many, their optimism was almost of a mystical nature. And in the churches visited, cold, wet and muddy flagstones supported kneeling crowds of people who worshiped in the midst of their hardships," he said.

Prospects Grim

"The Americas—both North and South—are the great reservoirs for relief subscriptions and supplies upon which demands will grow and grow if anything effective is to be done continuously during this war. Beyond the struggle, whenever it ends, there is the prospect of a grim period of reconstruction," Davis said.

Mrs. B. J. Mix, of Chicago, chairman of the Polish civilian war relief unit of the Red Cross chapter there, spoke briefly at the night session to voice the gratitude of the Poles. Eliot Wadsworth, member of the central committee of the Red Cross, presided.

The new Red Cross motion picture, "Mobilized for Mercy," had its premiere showing last night. Red Cross tableaux directed by D. Melville Carr, of Chicago Chapter, typified the range of services.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, in a keynote address, announced that "it now seems probably that in the very near future we may be compelled to ask the people for a substantial relief fund" to meet the "continuing and ever-increasing needs" of war sufferers.

His address was broadcast nationally and to Europe and South America.

Davis pointed out that nearly $800,000 in voluntary contributions had been received from the people of the United States and that the Red Cross has set aside $1,000,000 from its own funds for war relief. "Most of this money has been spent," he said.

Safety workers of the Red Cross helped in saving 111,000 lives in the past year, he said. "Authoritative sources report that for the first time in many years there has been a material decrease in the number of fatalities due to accidents."

In 106 disasters in the United States and 28 more in its insular possessions in the past year, $750,000 had been expended, Davis said.

Membership in the American Red Cross has increased 1,400,000 in the past year to reach a total of 7,000,000 men and women, he added.

Davis recounted the many and varied activities of the Red Cross in this country, stating that "meeting the needs at home is our primary responsibility."

Diplomatic representatives of more than a dozen nations attended the opening session, at which Frederick J. Koster, of San Francisco, was presiding officer.

Col. Daniel B. Strickler, of Lancaster, Pa., was named chairman of the committee on nominations to the Central Committee of the Red Cross, and John M. Harrison, of Minneapolis, was named chairman of the resolutions committee.

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, reviewed the history of the Red Cross movement at the opening session.

Robert Jenkins, of LaCrosse, Wis., 15-year-old boy who served as spokesman for the 8,000,000 Junior Red Cross members, made a plea for the youth of America and for the solution of their problems.

At the disaster relief meeting in the Chamber of Commerce Building, Smith told of a new method of disaster fighting—of accurately forecasting relief needs in advance of a flood.

He said that 100 Ohio Valley chapters have been equipped with contour maps showing how Weather Bureau flood stages affect riverfront communities. With these charts Red Cross workers have been able to determine in advance exact areas of inundation, affording time for evacuation warnings and advance planning for providing food and shelter.

Krock Elected

New York, May 6 (AP).—Election of Arthur Krock, Washington correspondent of the New York Times, to the advisory board of the Graduate School of Journalism of Columbia University for a term ending June 30, 1943, was announced today. He fills the vacancy caused by the death of Ralph Pulitzer.

Lehrbas Plans Early Return To War Zone

"I'm going back to Europe at the earliest possible moment," Lloyd Lehrbas, Associated Press foreign correspondent, said yesterday after hearing he had been awarded honorable mention by the Pulitzer Price committee for his dispatches from Warsaw, Bucharest and Ankara.

A prize of $500 was won by Otto D. Tolischus of the New York Times in the category that Lehrbas won honorable mention. The prize was awarded for distinguished service as a foreign or Washington correspondent during the year, the test being clearness, and terseness of style, preference being given to fair, judicious, well-balanced and well-informed interpretative writing, which shall make clear the significance of the subject covered in the correspondence or which shall promote international understanding and appreciation.

Lehrbas believes the citation he received was for telephoning the first news of the bombing of Warsaw by Germany, for scooping the world on the assassination of Premier Armand Calinescu of Rumania and for beating the world press on the payment of a large sum of money by Great Britain to Turkey at the time of the signing of the Anglo-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact.

For the past few months Lehrbas has been working for the Associated Press in Washington—between wars, as it were—but he has his bags packed, he said, to leave for Europe on 24-hour notice. His eyes are on the Balkans and western Europe.

Somewhat embarrassed by the new attention bestowed on a Pulitzer Prize winner, Lehrbas complained:

"It's like living in a goldfish bowl."

THEY SAY THIS ABOUT Mary...

Mary left the altar for war

"The wedding march turned to a march of war." There was rebellion in Scotland. Wasting no time, Mary armed with pistols, jumped on her horse. Beside her the young king rode in his gilt armour. Surrounded by her army of faithful friends she went forward to victory.

What greater tribute could the early makers of Highland Queen whisky offer than to name it for Mary! Her gift for making friends was the inspiration. And since those days this whisky has kept its character. Always it has remained light and delicate, yet it retains rare flavor and bouquet.

Strong Urges Plans to Defend Hemisphere

Military Engineers Told of Danger Spots For Enemy Invasions

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, Army war plans chief, said yesterday the United States must immediately launch a new armament program to be prepared to defend the Western Hemisphere against attack.

Citing Newfoundland, the Bahamas, Puerto Rico, Trinidad and the west coast of Central America and Mexico as possible danger spots which might be seized by an aggressor as a base for operations against the United States, Gen. Strong urged appropriations of nearly $500,000,000 additional for "critical and essential" weapons and equipment.

Speaking before the Society of American Military Engineers, Strong said that while initially the defense "of any of the American republics and Canada" lies primarily in the hands of the military forces of the country concerned, it is "perfectly obvious" that they would be inadequate in many cases to prevent seizure of bases by a "determined aggressor."

"Stark, Realistic Necessity"

American intervention in such cases is but "stark, realistic military necessity," Strong added.

He said that "more effective use of the time element" is the only new development in war in the present conflict, and that this has complicated our Western Hemisphere defense problem of "getting there fustest with the mostest men."

"This means we must maintain a small adequately trained, properly armed, highly mobile, seasoned force capable of acting instantly," he said. "We must be prepared to out-blitz the blitzkrieg."

Declaring the Army is still nearly $500,000,000 short of essential weapons and equipment required for the protective mobilization force, he added:

"We have made our plans and we are in position to take the first step for safeguarding the Western Hemisphere. We are not prepared to meet a major military effort and we would not be able to meet that situation unless this urgent procurement program is immediately undertaken."

James McDonald Also Talks

Declaring the Americas will be safe from attack so long as no aggressor has bases here and the Panama Canal remains open, the assistant chief of staff said the greatest danger to the canal is sabotage. A "lucky hit" by a powerful aerial bomb might likewise put the artery out of action, but every precaution is taken against such happenings he assured the group.

James G. McDonald, chairman of President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees, addressed the group on "possible consequences of the present European war."

"Republican Presidential candidates who say the United States will not go into war don't know it any more than President Wilson did in 1916," he said. "They said it because their audiences want to hear it."

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who was recently nominated to the Interstate Commerce Commission, was elected president of the society. Col. Wildurr Willing and Col. Charles D. Young were chosen vice presidents, and the following were named directors: Col. John Lansdale, Rear Admiral R. E. Bakenhus, Maj. J. H. Wheat, Col. J. B. Jackson, Col. Herbert J. Wild, and Maj. Victor V. Martin.

Brig. Gen. G. B. Pillsbury, U. S. A., retired, president of the society during the past year, declaring he was "unable to grasp the attitude of some of our adolescents toward war," told the group a "universal recognition by the youth of our country of their duties and responsibilities in the common interest in case of war" was the most essential preparedness need.

Family Is Routed By $2,500 Fire On Georgia Ave.

Fire of undetermined origin early yesterday caused an estimated $2,500 damage to a two-story building at 3413 George avenue northwest and drove half a dozen persons into the street.

The blaze was discovered by Charles P. Widmayer, who lives on the second floor at 3415 Georgia avenue. Widmayer was awakened by the smoke and fled to the street with his wife and three sons, Herbert (15), Edmund (17) and Raymond (13).

Considerable damage was done to an electrical shop operated by Max Poms on the first floor of the building.

Poms arived shortly after the blaze was extinguished, and on entering his shop was struck over the right eye by a piece of falling plaster. He was treated by a physician.

Wage Law Urged For Farm Labor By Sec. Perkins

Secretary of Labor Perkins urged yesterday that social security benefits and wage-hour regulations be extended in some form to workers on "industrial" farms, as distinguished from "home" farms.

Miss Perkins testified before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee that this would be one means of bettering the status of thousands of migratory farm workers.

The committee is conducting a special study of farm labor problems.

Ultimately, Miss Perkins said, efforts should be made to settle at least a portion of the Nation's migrant population in communities under the leadership of agricultural experts.

Besides wage-hour and social security laws, Miss Perkins suggested that maternal and child care should be extended to the migrant workers. She urged also extension of State unemployment compensation, child labor and accident prevention laws to the worker on industrial-type farms.

Mrs. D. F. Davis Will Succeed Miss Boardman

Red Cross Volunteer Services Director Plans to Retire

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, whose name has become synonymous with volunteer services of the American Red Cross during her 40 years of work in that field, is withdrawing from active direction of the Volunteer Special Services, it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, of Washington, has been appointed to succeed her as national director of these services, it was announced after the meeting of the central committee of the Red Cross yesterday.

The volunteer services, which Mrs. Davis will head, were created and enlarged under Miss Boardman's direction. She said yesterday it would be difficult to estimate closely the number of persons engaged in this national volunteer work, but that it undoubtedly would run into hundreds of thousands.

Miss Boardman will continue as secretary of the American Red Cross, a post to which she has been re-elected each year since 1919.

Mrs. Davis' leadership in volunteer work has been shown in her service as vice chairman of these activities for the District of Columbia Chapter which has produced thousands of garments and surgical dressings for war relief in Europe. She was Mrs. Pauline Morton Sabin, of New York, before her marriage to Mr. Davis, the former Secretary of War and former Governor General of the Philippine Islands.

Krock Elected

New York, May 6 (AP).—Election of Arthur Krock, Washington correspondent of the New York Times, to the advisory board of the Graduate School of Journalism of Columbia University for a term ending June 30, 1943, was announced today. He fills the vacancy caused by the death of Ralph Pulitzer.

Lehrbas Plans Early Return To War Zone

"I'm going back to Europe at the earliest possible moment," Lloyd Lehrbas, Associated Press foreign correspondent, said yesterday after hearing he had been awarded honorable mention by the Pulitzer Price committee for his dispatches from Warsaw, Bucharest and Ankara.

A prize of $500 was won by Otto D. Tolischus of the New York Times in the category that Lehrbas won honorable mention. The prize was awarded for distinguished service as a foreign or Washington correspondent during the year, the test being clearness and terseness of style, preference being given to fair, judicious, well-balanced and well-informed interpretative writing, which shall make clear the significance of the subject covered in the correspondence or which shall promote international understanding and appreciation.

Lehrbas believes the citation he received was for telephoning the first news of the bombing of Warsaw by Germany, for scooping the world on the assassination of Premier Armand Calinescu of Rumania and for beating the world press on the payment of a large sum of money by Great Britain to Turkey at the time of the signing of the Anglo-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact.

For the past few months Lehrbas has been working for the Associated Press in Washington—between wars, as it were—but he has his bags packed, he said, to leave for Europe on 24-hour notice. His eyes are on the Balkans and western Europe.

Somewhat embarrassed by the new attention bestowed on a Pulitzer Prize winner, Lehrbas complained:

"It's like living in a goldfish bowl."

THEY SAY THIS ABOUT Mary...

Mary left the altar for war

"The wedding march turned to a march of war." There was rebellion in Scotland. Wasting no time, Mary armed with pistols, jumped on her horse. Beside her the young king rode in his gilt armour. Surrounded by her army of faithful friends she went forward to victory.

What greater tribute could the early makers of Highland Queen whisky offer than to name it for Mary! Her gift for making friends was the inspiration. And since those days this whisky has kept its character. Always it has remained light and delicate, yet it retains rare flavor and bouquet.

Strong Urges Plans to Defend Hemisphere

Military Engineers Told of Danger Spots For Enemy Invasions

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, Army war plans chief, said yesterday the United States must immediately launch a new armament program to be prepared to defend the Western Hemisphere against attack.

Citing Newfoundland, the Bahamas, Puerto Rico, Trinidad and the west coast of Central America and Mexico as possible danger spots which might be seized by an aggressor as a base for operations against the United States, Gen. Strong urged appropriations of nearly $500,000,000 additional for "critical and essential" weapons and equipment.

Speaking before the Society of American Military Engineers, Strong said that while initially the defense "of any of the American republics and Canada" lies primarily in the hands of the military forces of the country concerned, it is "perfectly obvious" that they would be inadequate in many cases to prevent seizure of bases by a "determined aggressor."

"Stark, Realistic Necessity"

American intervention in such cases is but "stark, realistic military necessity," Strong added.

He said that "more effective use of the time element" is the only new development in war in the present conflict, and that this has complicated our Western Hemisphere defense problem of "getting there fustest with the mostest men."

"This means we must maintain a small adequately trained, properly armed, highly mobile, seasoned force capable of acting instantly," he said. "We must be prepared to out-blitz the blitzkrieg."

Declaring the Army is still nearly $500,000,000 short of essential weapons and equipment required for the protective mobilization force, he added:

"We have made our plans and we are in position to take the first step for safeguarding the Western Hemisphere. We are not prepared to meet a major military effort and we would not be able to meet that situation unless this urgent procurement program is immediately undertaken."

James McDonald Also Talks

Declaring the Americas will be safe from attack so long as no aggressor has bases here and the Panama Canal remains open, the assistant chief of staff said the greatest danger to the canal is sabotage. A "lucky hit" by a powerful aerial bomb might likewise put the artery out of action, but every precaution is taken against such happenings he assured the group.

James G. McDonald, chairman of President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees, addressed the group on "possible consequences of the present European war."

"Republican Presidential candidates who say the United States will not go into war don't know it any more than President Wilson did in 1916," he said. "They said it because their audiences want to hear it."

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who was recently nominated to the Interstate Commerce Commission, was elected president of the society. Col. Wildurr Willing and Col. Charles D. Young were chosen vice presidents, and the following were named directors: Col. John Lansdale, Rear Admiral R. E. Bakenhus, Maj. J. H. Wheat, Col. J. B. Jackson, Col. Herbert J. Wild, and Maj. Victor V. Martin.

Brig. Gen. G. B. Pillsbury, U. S. A., retired, president of the society during the past year, declaring he was "unable to grasp the attitude of some of our adolescents toward war," told the group a "universal recognition by the youth of our country of their duties and responsibilities in the common interest in case of war" was the most essential preparedness need.

Family Is Routed By $2,500 Fire On Georgia Ave.

Fire of undetermined origin early yesterday caused an estimated $2,500 damage to a two-story building at 3413 George avenue northwest and drove half a dozen persons into the street.

The blaze was discovered by Charles P. Widmayer, who lives on the second floor at 3415 Georgia avenue. Widmayer was awakened by the smoke and fled to the street with his wife and three sons, Herbert (15), Edmund (17) and Raymond (13).

Considerable damage was done to an electrical shop operated by Max Poms on the first floor of the building.

Poms arived shortly after the blaze was extinguished, and on entering his shop was struck over the right eye by a piece of falling plaster. He was treated by a physician.

Wage Law Urged For Farm Labor By Sec. Perkins

Secretary of Labor Perkins urged yesterday that social security benefits and wage-hour regulations be extended in some form to workers on "industrial" farms, as distinguished from "home" farms.

Miss Perkins testified before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee that this would be one means of bettering the status of thousands of migratory farm workers.

The committee is conducting a special study of farm labor problems.

Ultimately, Miss Perkins said, efforts should be made to settle at least a portion of the Nation's migrant population in communities under the leadership of agricultural experts.

Besides wage-hour and social security laws, Miss Perkins suggested that maternal and child care should be extended to the migrant workers. She urged also extension of State unemployment compensation, child labor and accident prevention laws to the worker on industrial-type farms.

Ironside Hails Troops Back From Norway

'Don't Think You Were Driven Out,' He Tells Soldiers

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), May 7.—Battle-worn Allied troops, just landed in a northern British port from Norway, were praised early today by Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the Imperial General Staff, for having "come back with your tails up."

"Don't think you were driven out of Norway," Ironside told the soldiers.

"You were ordered out of Norway, and the great thing is that your discipline brought you out.

"When you talk to your people, tell them how well you fought—that you have come back with your tails up—and that you will be ready again to show the same courage as you did then."

French in Scotland

At the same time it was disclosed that transports of French troops had landed at a Scottish port Sunday.

Facing the mixed British and French forces, Gen. Ironside advised them:

"Remember this—you beat those people when they came at you—you, with none of the implements that they had. . . . Man for man and under proper conditions you are a match for the Germans.

"You were an advance guard, and we had thought that we would be able to get to you the guns and aviation which make it possible to fight such a machine as you were opposed to.

"But, as you know, very soon the race went against us."

Dombas Stand Cited

A war office message cited the stand taken by Allied troops south of Dombas, Norway, and their withdrawal before a superior German force as operations worthy of the highest army traditions.

Gen. Pacet, who conducted the withdrawal, related:

"We were actually 100 miles from our base (Andalsnes) when I got the order to withdraw, and we were in close touch with the enemy.

"That we successfully carried out that very difficult operation of withdrawing over a long distance in contact with the enemy was mainly due to the splendid endurance and fighting qualities of the units engaged. They fought five separate rear-guard actions on the way back."

Bombing Called Fearful

A Scottish private of the Royal Engineers, a veteran of the World War, reported:

"The shell fire and machine-gunning were not quite so heavy as in the last war but the bombing was something fearful. As many as 40 planes were over us at one time and they dropped 400 bombs.

"The place was full of spies. Every move we made was known to the Germans almost as soon as we made it."

A French major said he saw no German soldiers during 10 days in Norway but that the town where his men landed had suffered severely from German bombers, even though it was not an important military objective.

No Sign of Fleet

"We saw no sign of the German fleet, not even a submarine."

The major said residents of the Norwegian town in which they landed fled to the woods daily at dawn to escape German planes which came over in bombing, machine-gunning waves of about 10 throughout the day.

The French were said to have withdrawn from Norway without loss of a man, although harried by German bombers continually.

Telling of spies "everywhere," a British private said the Norwegians executed a Norwegian radio operator who had been sending tips to German air raiders.

No Food for 36 Hours

A sergeant who said he had nine years of regular army service said of the Allied retreat to the coast, "It was a marvelous piece of rear-guard fighting. I have done a great many maneuvers in my time, and this was just like another one except that it was the real thing.

Norway Will Fight to End With Allies, Says Leader

Crack Troops in North Ready to Fight Invader, Says Foreign Minister Koht; But They Must Help, He Adds

By Tania Long

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 6.—Norway will continue to fight side by side with the Allies until the end of the war, Halvdan Koht, 66-year-old Norwegian foreign minister, who arrived in London yesterday, told reporters.

"Though a greater part" of his country's southern army had been either killed, wounded or dispersed, Koht said, there remains still the northern army, which, in training and equipment, constituted the "crack" troops of Norway and which have not been yet employed against the invader.

This force, the minister explained, "had been standing ready in the north of the country. The reason is easy to understand. For the past two years we were afraid of a possible Russian aggression. Finland was attacked, but not Norway. But we had been afraid they might come to our country—and they were so close—and, therefore, we organized our northern army and trained it well."

Early in the day the Norwegian foreign minister had called on British Foreign Secretary Halifax and on Prime Minister Chamberlain. The suubject of both talks, Koht told the correspondents, had been the "close cooperation in the conduct of the war."

"Our allegiance is, of couurse, based on the assuumption that we will get the necessary support," Koht said, answering a question. "With the northern army we can continue to fight, but we cannot do it alone. We do not know the figures of the German army in Norway. Perhaps it is 50,000 or 100,000. I don't know, but it is too large for us alone. If we do not get the necessary support there will be no Norway left to fight on."

Koht explained the neutrality stand his country had maintained until it was attacked by the Nazis.

"I don't think," he said, "that the reasons are well understood here. You expected us to take your side in this war and we understood very well the ideals for which you are fighting. But we felt it the duty of our country to stay neutral, but now, after what happened we can help with good conscience, and it gives us moral strength in our fight to have kept strictly neutral until we were forced to go to war."

Duce, Crown Prince Hold Army Talk

government denied it had heard Sunday night of Turkish troop concentrations on the frontiers.

10. German Gen. Tippelskirch, said to have toured Denmark and Norway just before the German invasion, completed a tour of the Balkan capitals.

11. Soviet Russia denied she had six or eight divisions on the Hungarian frontier.

12. Germany's press, surpassing Italy's in the stridency of its accusations of Allied intrigue to spread the war, published a purported telephone conversation between Premier Reynaud and Prime Minister Chamberlain saying the Allied army in the Near East would be ready for action by May 15.

Britain Not Satisfied

According to the United Press, Italy's much advertised "nonbelligerency" is not satisfactory to Britain, and the request for a definition of Mussolini's "exact position," it was suggested, was the diplomatic counterpart of the concentration of Allied fleets in the Eastern Mediterranean.

Sir Percy Loraine, Britain's Ambassador to Rome, returned by plane from London, and according to the New York Times is expected to see Il Duce, probably today.

Britain's request, which the British embassy refused to confirm, was said to have followed the admiralty's order for British shipping to avoid the Mediterranean, issued last week.

While this report had the British seeking information, activities—and rumors—in Vatican City indicated the Pope is trying to restrain Italy from a rash answer.

Political Significance

Herbert Matthews, New York Times correspondent, noting that observers "are more puzzled than ever concerning the drift of Italian policy," nevertheless saw political significance in the coincidence of Crown Prince Umberto's two visits.

Matthews said the Pope's talk with Umberto is a "gentle indication" that he hopes Italy will remain at peace, although "it is certain he entertains no hopes now of a general peace and no intentions of offering any plans."

The United Press, however, cited a Vatican rumor to the effect that Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's "peace ambassador" to the Vatican, had a secret talk with the Pope last Saturday (Taylor has been "officially" in Florence for a week). The United Press then quoted high Vatican sources to the effect that the Pope had suggested to Taylor that the moment might be at hand for a "final effort" to secure a general peace before Italy is drawn into the war.

In Washington, the State Department denied it had received any messages from Taylor.

The Times conceded that the Pope, believing it "worthwhile to use his influence in trying to keep Italy at peace," would be working along the same lines as President Roosevelt. It also noted speculation linking Taylor's Vatican activities last week and United States Ambassador Phillips' talk with Mussolini.

At that time the Associated Press reported Mussolini was understood to have assured Phillips that Italy had no warlike intentions for the present.

Meanwhile, Britons at Alexandria proclaimed their preparedness should Italy decide that Germany's claimed air successes against British warships merit a further test in the Mediterranean.

Allies Defiant

The Associated Press, reporting arrival there of a squadron of cruisers reinforcing British and French Battleships already in the roadstead, said British warplanes stood with loaded bomb racks ready to answer Mussolini's air fleet in kind.

British official circles hinted Italy's decision would be known within a week, and said: "The Allies are fully prepared for any emergency, in event of war being declared, which we doubt."

The defiant Allied attitude they said, was a reply to a "naval demonstration of great significance" by which they probably meant reports of Italian naval, air, and army concentrations in the Dodecanese Islands.

Egypt Orders Blackout

Egypt, ally of Britain, continued defense preparations, canceling ordinary visas, testing coastal guns, and disclosing a week's blackout, starting today—first in Egypt's history.

As for Italy's naval answer—the new Littorio which joined her sister ship, the Vittorio Veneto, in the fleet yesterday—the Associated Press quoted Jane's Fighting Ships to show that Il Duce still lacks capital ship superiority. Italy has only four other battleships—all 23,622-tonners—and two of those were to have undergone reconstruction last year. The Allies, with five new British 35,000-tonners undergoing trials, and four French ships of the same size nearing completion, will soon exceed the Italians in the bigger ships, as well as in the older and smaller dreadnaught classes.

On Italy's land fronts, the two with Yugoslavia seemed to hold the major potential dangers. Gayda's disclosure of a "few precautions" appeared to give some substance to the Yugoslav reports that 300,000 of Italy's boasted "8,000,000 bayonets" are prickling the northern frontier of the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

Nazis May Use Blockade Plan Of Napoleon

Adaptation Forecast If War Is Carried To Mediterranean

By Russell Hill.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, May 6.—While the Nazi press campaign against alleged Allied attempts to "create a new theater of war in the Balkans" grew more intensified today, political circles forecast a German plan for the inclusion "in certain eventualities" of all Europe east of the Rhine in a counter-blockade of England, comparable to Napoleon's famous "Continental System."

The Germans, it was said, would attempt to carry out such a plan only if the Allies, by "aggressive" measures, carried the war into the Mediterranean. It should be noted that the Nazi policy has always been to counteract possible "aggressions" by striking the first blow.

Counterblockade Widened

If such a grandiose scheme for completely cutting off Europe from England should be made a reality, Germany would not only be able to sever the Allies from their Balkan markets but could develop this area as an economic hinterland for the Reich.

Since the invasion of Denmark and Norway the scope of the counterblockade has been widened, not only to include those two countries, but all of northeastern Europe—Sweden, Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and even Russia, in so far as she trades through the Baltic Sea.

If war came to the Mediterranean it is assumed here that Italy would be involved. It is evident that the Reich expects the Italian air force and navy to be more than a match for any ships and planes the Allies can spare in the Mediterranean.

"Life Line" Threatened

Success for the Axis powers would mean not only the inclusion of southeastern Europe in the counterblockade system but the disruption of the British "life line" in the Mediterranean—the trade route to Egypt, Syria, Turkey, Palestine and the Suez Canal, and of France's communications with her North African countries.

Although Allied trade interests in the Balkans have not in recent years been nearly as extensive as those of the Reich, the Allies have striven to decrease these countries' economic values to Germany.

Both Yugoslavia and Rumania sell England timber. Particularly important since Scandinavian timber is no longer available. Both England and France buy large quantities of oil from Rumania and purchase copper, lead and zinc from Yugoslavia. Chrome, copper and manganese are imported from Turkey and eggs from Bulgaria.

Should the Mediterranean trade route be severed for the Allies, the import of oil from Iraq and Iran, of cotton from Egypt and of iron ore from northern Africa would become either very difficult or entirely impossible.

Hitler Gives Assurances to Swedish King

Stockholm, May 6.—The Swedish foreign office announced tonight King Gustaf V had redefined Sweden's position of continued neutrality in a letter to Adolf Hitler late in April and that the German Fuehrer had replied with assurances that Germany respected Swedish neutrality.

The announcement confirmed in specific form a report today by DNB, German official news agency, that Hitler and Gustaf had agreed on the mutual "future political attitude" of the two nations.

The King's message emphasized anew Sweden's firm intention of maintaining her neutrality "in all directions," the Swedish news agency said.

Allies Lay New Mines

Meanwhile, in the Norwegian campaign, the Germans appeared determined to complete occupation of the entire country, and were reported hammering vigorously at the remaining footholds of the Allies.

Continuation of Allied action against German ships moving to Norway across the Skagerrak was reported, however, by naval circles here, which said new Allied mines had been laid in the area west of Goteborg, Sweden.

They expressed belief new mines sank a Swedish fishing vessel and an unidentified German ship today, and were probably laid by submarine.

The first necessity before Germany can stretch her hold to such extreme northern points as Hammerfest and Kirkenes is to reinforce her troops at Narvik, beleaguered by Allied forces in the surrounding country.

Nazi Column Obstructed

The flow northward of heavy transport planes, reported with both men and supplies, indicates this already has begun although on land at least one German column was said still to be obstructed below Trondheim.

The newspaper Aftonbladet said die-hard Norwegians had reported a victory today over a Nazi force of 3,000 men east of Storen, and south of Trondheim.

If the Germans push their occupation to the northernmost limits of Norway Sweden would lose whatever hopes she may now have of possible unhampered trade routes to the west by way of Petsamo, Finland, and Arctic waters.

Even now all of Scandinavia and Finland have been drawn into the economic orbit of Germany and Russia either by force or circumstance.

The German drive to oust the Allies from the Narvik area of Arctic Norway, besides being designed to gain complete control of Swedish iron ore shipments, also appears aimed at forestalling any possible Allied move to hinder such shipments through the Gulf of Bothnia.

Nazis Drive North

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 6.—A German overland expedition driving northward through Norway today was reported at the outskirts of Mo, the halfway point along its 300-mile route from Namsos to Narvik.

The drive had the triple objective of:

1. Relieving the German garrison in the Arctic ore port of Narvik from attacking British, French and Norwegian forces.

2. Mopping up, en route, the Allied detachments which, left behind in last week's embarkation at Namsos, also are believed to be trying to reach Narvik.

3. Establishing a powerful air base at Bodo, only 110 miles air line from Narvik, for the hard-hitting "Stukas" ("Sturikampf-bombers" or "dive battle bombers").

Hour's Flight to Narvik

Soon after it was announced that Fuehrer Hitler had ordered the overland drive of over 300 miles from Namsos through the wilds of northern Norway to Narvik, military experts said the most immediate of the three Nazi goals would be to establish the air base at Bodo.

From this site the "Stukas" would be able to make round trips to Narvik in an hour, to blast at the British and French positions and harass the Allied sea forces which now are attempting to crowd the Germans out of this vital terminus of the rail line running east to the rich Swedish ore mines.

German troops already are reported to be within perhaps half a dozen miles of Mo, northern end both of the rail line coming up from central and southern Norway and of the improved highway.

Ahead of the advancing German forces, scouting planes reported they had located the French and British units which are moving north in the same direction and contact between the two was expected hourly.

Around Narvik itself, meanwhile, the Allies were reported to be pouring in a constant stream of reinforcements.

British Have Heavy Cannon

It also is known to the German army that the British recently brought heavy cannon there to bolster their positions, and it is reported here that, with Norwegian troops having joined the British and French, the joint Allied supremacy now is ten to twenty-fold.

(There was nothing to report from Narvik, the British war office said. Allied troops are reported besieging between 3,000 and 4,000 German troops who have held Narvik since a few hours after Norway was invaded.)

Chance To Start Anew

As the House Judiciary Committee meets today, it will be under a powerful spotlight of public interest. Part of that interest reflects a widespread demand for enactment of the Hatch bill which the committee pigeonholed last week. But it is also in part attributable to curiosity to see how the Judiciary Committee will react to the storm of justifiable criticism swirling around it.

There are increasing indications that the Hatch bill will be passed by the House, as it has been by the Senate. Congressmen know that it is a popular measure. They know there is an urgent need for some effective means of preventing the use of Federal funds to support State and local political machines. Some doubtless fear that enactment of the bill would detract from the support they may expect from local bosses. But such potential loss seems insignificant compared to the ammunition which a vote against the clean-politics bill would give to their opponents.

The immediate question is whether the bill will be passed with or without the aid of the Judiciary Committee. Thus far the committee has played a craven and ignoble part. It attempted to kill the clean-politics bill and to conceal from the public the names of the legislators responsible for that short-sighted act. A majority of the committee members have now dissociated themselves from the decision they are supposed to have made behind closed doors. So the committee has the task of restoring its shaken integrity as well as clearing its record on the Hatch bill.

Its meeting this morning may thus be a historic session. Aside from the fate of this important legislation, the country will be eager to know whether members of the Judiciary Committee are sufficiently statesmanlike to acknowledge a grave mistake and start afresh on a more constructive line of action.

The Fight For Narvik

Great stakes were involved in the fighting in central and southern Norway which ended last week in a resounding triumph for the German army and air force. The stakes in the now intensified struggle over Narvik, Norway's great iron shipping port north of the Arctic Circle, are not less considerable.

In possession of that port, the Allies would be in a position to reestablish the link between Sweden and the outside world and, if necessary, to go to Sweden's support should that country be invaded. Moreover, with Narvik in their hands, they could prevent that port from being used for Swedish ore shipments to Germany.

To be sure, Swedish ore can be sent via Lullea, on the Gulf of Bothnia, and the inner Baltic route. But Lullea lacks the facilities to handle all of the ore mined in northern Sweden and it is doubtful whether the additional facilities needed could be provided in less than a period of months. Even if this proved feasible, the Germans would find ore shipments cut off the moment the Gulf of Bothnia again becomes choked with ice. Actually the port of Lullea is open for navigation only about 200 days a year.

For this reason alone it is essential for Germany to retain her hold on Narvik established by the sudden coup of April 9. But more is involved than the imperious necessity of maintaining a constant flow of iron ore between Sweden and the Reich. With possession of Narvik, the whole of Norway's Atlantic seaboard from the Skagerrak to the Arctic Circle and beyond would be in German hands. Innumerable submarine and air bases on that coast would enable the Nazis to strike a powerful blow at the Allied blockade.

No wonder then that German reinforcements are being rushed to the beleaguered Nazi garrison at Narvik by air and by land. The struggle is again primarily between air power and sea power. If the Germans can supply and supplement their troops by air operations and, in addition, prevent the Allied attacking force from securing a firm grip on the port, their victory will be as significant as that achieved in central and southern Norway.

Job Insurance Benefits

The American Association for Social Security has made a revealing study of the operation of State unemployment insurance systems during the past year. Checks totaling in round numbers $430,000,000 were sent out to the unemployed—an amount not far short of the $482,000,000 estimated to have been spent on general relief by the States during 1939. However, the average unemployment insurance payment was only $84.24 per worker as compared with an estimate of $297 for the average beneficiary of general relief and $633 for the average WPA worker.

Of course, comparisons of this sort tend to be misleading. For unemployment insurance benefits are in no sense a substitute for relief payments. Their primary purpose is to tide workers over limited waiting periods between jobs. The direct-relief and work-relief outlays, on the other hand, go to destitute persons who have either exhausted their insurance benefits or failed to qualify for such benefits.

The question as to the adequacy of the unemployment insurance payments cannot, therefore, be judged except on the basis of a detailed analysis of the conditions under which they are paid. Even then it would be a mistake to assume that such payments are necessarily inadequate because they are below the level of so-called living wages. Unemployment benefits should not be regarded as a substitute for regular wages. Experience in other countries has shown that over-liberal insurance payments are an irresistible temptation to malingering and tend to retard reemployment.

It appears, however, that in a good many States the average weekly benefits paid are so low as to indicate the need for liberalization. Checks under $5 accounted for about 48 per cent of all payments in Mississippi, 42 per cent in North Carolina and 30 per cent in Arkansas. Partial unemployment payments were in many cases so meager that the survey concluded they were "almost entirely useless in terms of social protection."

The question of what should be the maximum duration of the benefit period is highly controversial. The conclusion resulting from the current study is that in the great majority of States a longer period would "probably meet the problem presented by a large majority of the unemployed." Under an insurance system financed by pay roll taxes, however, the question of cost as well as adequacy has to be considered.

Last year not much more than half the money collected for unemployment insurance was paid out in benefits. But this does not necessarily mean that every State would be able to liberalize payments and extend waiting periods. For some States paid out a very large percentage of what they took in, while others distributed a negligible percentage of the intake.

Abraham Epstein, editor of Social Security, the organ of the American Association for Social Security, is a well known advocate of Nation-wide unemployment insurance as opposed to the existing system in which each State sets up its own plan with the approval of the Federal Government.

In recording the wide range of payments and the heavy cost of the insurance program as a whole, compared with the amount of aggregate benefits, Mr. Epstein provides excellent ammunition for an attack upon the separate State systems. National unemployment insurance would probably encounter constitutional obstacles and other objections. But the evidence certainly shows a need for much greater uniformity than has now been achieved.

The FBI Absolved

The preservation of our civil liberties depends not only upon impartial enforcement of the laws, but also upon law-abiding conduct on the part of enforcement agencies. Hence Attorney General Jackson very properly decided to investigate Senator Norris' charges that FBI agents had mistreated persons arrested in Detroit for encouraging enlistment in the Spanish Loyalist army.

It is reassuring to learn from the head of the civil liberties unit of the Department of Justice, who conducted the probe, that the agents in Detroit "acted within their instructions and exercised their discretion in good faith."

The cry of "third degree" methods is raised so often that the public is inclined to become skeptical or indifferent to such charges. In this instance skepticism was well-founded. But it is a wise precaution to make an occasional independent inquiry into the methods employed in the handling of prisoners. The mere knowledge that such investigations may be ordered has a salutary restraining effect upon the agents of the law.

In the present case the investigator has certain criticisms to make about the handling of large groups of prisoners by deputy marshals. His comments are no reflection upon the conduct of these officers, but merely upon the customary practice of handcuffing and chaining prisoners together.

It would not be at all surprising if, in their zeal for apprehending criminals who are a deadly menace to society, some agents of the FBI should occasionally forget the rights which suspects enjoy under our form of government. Attorney General Jackson's confidence that our traditional civil liberties are not in the least endangered by the FBI will do much to dispel doubts on that score and prevent the bringing of baseless charges of "third degree" methods.

The Silver Issue Again

Even those who oppose Senator Townsend's bill to discontinue foreign silver purchases no longer believe that the silver-buying program will achieve its original monetary objectives.

The only other halfway plausible argument in favor of continuing silver buying is that it is a useful instrument of foreign policy. But the chief beneficiary of our buying operations at present is Mexico. And Mexico has just shown her gratitude for our generosity by brusquely refusing to submit the claims of defrauded American investors to arbitration.

Generally speaking, the United States Government rightly refuses to act as collector for private investors. But when a foreign country takes over the property of American citizens, and fails to make the adequate and prompt compensation demanded under international law, it is not only the right but the duty of the Government to protest. Unfortunately, verbal protests have been of no avail in the case of Mexico. It is just possible that a sudden cessation of purchases of silver by the Treasury would produce a change of heart.

Whether or not that should prove to be the case, we have nothing to gain by continuing to buy silver from Mexico. On the contrary, the more silver we purchase abroad the more we stand to lose in the end from exchanging valuable goods and services for an overvalued metal for which we have no use. Moreover, silver purchases add to our already tremendous volume of excess bank reserves and thus aggravate an ever-present inflationary menace.

In short, there is no valid reason for obstructing passage of the Townsend bill now before the Senate. And there are numerous reasons—both economic and political—for urging its prompt approval.

Task For The Red Cross

The American Red Cross, which opened its national convention here yesterday, is faced with a problem of heart-breaking magnitude.

The tide of conflict has inundated one country after another, leaving a tremendous amount of human wreckage in its wake. Particularly the indiscriminate bombing of civilian populations which, as President Roosevelt wrote the convention "has aroused the horror of all mankind," has resulted in a rapid multiplication of victims.

There are already, it has been estimated, more than 2,000,000 refugees or evacuees in Europe. Millions of others in Poland, Finland, Norway and elsewhere are desperately in need of food, clothing and medical aid. But, as Malcolm Davis, associate secretary of the League of Red Cross Societies, has said, the situation, bad as it is, will undoubtedly "get worse before it gets better."

Already the American Red Cross has rendered yeoman service in helping the war sufferers abroad. But the task grows with each passing day and so do the difficulties. It is hardly surprising, therefore, that the current convention is expected to prove the largest of its kind ever to meet here, with representatives from every corner of the Union and delegates from affiliated Red Cross societies.

For, as Ernest J. Swift, the vice chairman of the American Red Cross, points out, the very magnitude of the war relief problem constitutes an unprecedent challenge. There is every reason to belief that, with the support of the American people, this challenge will be met ably by the Red Cross.

Teeth Will Be Provided

From the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Announcement by one of the larger insurance companies that it is prepared to issue policies against the loss, damage or destruction of dentures (false teeth, to you), brings to mind the story of the Negro preacher who was haranguing his flock concerning Judgment Day.

Toward the climax of his sermon he shouted:

"An' there will be weepin' and wailin' an' gnashin' of teeth. There will be——"

"But I ain't got no teeth."

His pastor fixed him with a glare and a rigid index finger.

"Brother, teeth will be provided!"

Common Goal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

President Roosevelt and Agriculture Local, No. 2, U. F. W. A., are both working on a common problem. An understanding was reached last week between Miss Martha Townsend, personnel chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and representatives of the B. A. E. unit of our union to this effect. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics will notify U. F. W. A. Local, No. 2, of all vacancies which two older union members, who received dismissal notices, may be qualified to fill.

This agreement was reached on the same day that President Roosevelt issued a proclamation designating the first week of May as National Employment Week and urging employers to try especially to give jobs to workers over 40 years old. Since the elderly workers here involved have been continuously employed under "temporary" appointments for a period of two years, the union is seeking to have these workers placed on the rolls as permanent employes.

This is just one example, among many, of how a U. F. W. A. union works with Government administrators toward a common goal.

Fourteen Points

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In spite of every effort put forward by President Woodrow Wilson, the World War was fought with hatred, and peace was made in bitterness of spirit. Had peace been based fairly and squarely upon the 14 points, hatred and bitterness of spirit would have been allayed, and comity between the nations established.

It is credibly reported that before President Wilson sailed for Europe in December, 1918, he sent a message, through Col. House, to his associates about to meet at Versailles, saying, in substance, that he had as yet received no formal approval of the 14 points, and that he desired assurance in writing that the Allied powers accept the 14 points as the working formula for peace. It was obvious that they did not take the 14 points seriously. No written statement was prepared.

Before the people of the United States take part in the present war, we must be assured by definite and binding pledges that peace will bring about economic adjustments essential to all nations and political arrangements satisfactory to the peoples of each country.

Bullets And Ballots

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

If the average citizen was told that he was sitting over a keg of blasting powder; that a fuse led from the keg outside the house; that a vicious thug was getting ready to light the fuse, and that the officials he had elected to office were encouraging and protecting the thug, he would undoubtedly feel called upon to bestir himself before it was too late.

But when the disclosures of the Dies Committee show that nationally we are just about in the situation pictured above, the average man seems to feel that there is nothing for him to do about it.

On May 4 the time will expire in which residents of the Virginia suburbs can pay the poll tax to entitle them vote in November. In Norway only bullets can talk now. In America ballots can still talk, and they are the only thing that can talk short of force.

Mr. American, will you stop the thug with ballots or bullets? Will you rebuke with the ballot those who have so coddled the creatures of Moscow that they have waxed strong and impudent, or do you prefer to wait until they succeed in lighting the fuse? Awake, America!

Communists And Liberty

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The following quotation from Lenin shows exactly what democracy means to the Communists, and perhaps explains why they are putting up such a stalwart fight for civil liberties.

"He knows (the Communist) that there is no other road to socialism but the road through democracy, through political liberty. He therefore strives for the complete and consistent achievement of democracy for the sake of attaining the ultimate goal—socialism."—Reprinted on page 29 of Earl Browder's book, "The People's Front.")

Are we going to let these Godless traitors use our democracy as an avenue to revolution and the overthrow of our Government? Are we supposed to build and strengthen our democracy so that their march might be made easier and their victory hastened?

So far, it would seem so. Some men holding high and influential offices in our Government, our religious institutions, our institutions of learning, and our labor organizations are even acting as convoys to this march of death and destruction.

It is time for us to show them that our democracy does not offer the protection they need in order that they might destroy it. If the real Americans fail to come forward in defense of their country, we need not be surprised to see organizations like the Ku Klux Klan, the Christian Front, or the German American Bund growing in number and strength.

Taussig's Statement

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The writer is not a politician nor a pessimist. In his modest way he wishes to congratulate Admiral Taussig on his recent statements to the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. He spoke the truth and the committee would do well to listen.

His information was not obtained from a swivel chair, but from actual contact and observation with world conditions as they exist. He is the latest victim to be crucified by the present Administration and by his own department.

Unfortunately our present regulations forbid the officers of the Army and Navy from giving the public, whom they are paid to protect, the information that is so vital, or the benefit of their technical knowledge. Admiral Taussig's remarks concerning Japan were so true that the wise men of officialdom have chosen to deny them.

How many of our present Congressmen have been in Japan or know anything about that country? Perhaps there might be a junketing trip to that island empire, similar to the one made to the Philippine Islands in 1920. Yet this same Congress decides where the money will be spent to protect the people of America from any foreign foes.

The Navy has continually recommended an outpost at Guam and other far distant islands, but Congress would rather let the Japanese strike Hawaii first, and after taking that group of islands it would greatly facilitate operations against the West Coast and the Panama Canal.

A Tragedy In The G. O. P.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In 1878 J. H. Roberts was superintendent of the bindery, Government Printing Office. To assist him in his travels, he possessed a horse which, because of its deliberate movements after once having been persuaded to get under motion, was known by the ironical name of Chain Lightning.

On March 22, 1878, it was discovered that Chain Lightning had been unable to keep up the fight any longer, and had lain down and gone where good horses go. The news of this calamity spread rapidly throughout the building. The office poet immediately went into a huddle, and in a short time a slip containing the following was passed around:

Exequy on the demise of the noble steed belonging to J. H. R.——s Chain Lightning, whose untimely death occurred in the courtyard of the Government Printing Office, March 22, 1878.

He sits in grief like one beside a corpse,
His thin hands clasped above his swaying head;
His pet, his pride, his faithful friend, his horse
Is dead.

In the gray dawn he stole into the place
Where, stretched on straw, reposed his former pride.
He drew his sleeve across his bearded face
And cried.

"Alas! thou'rt gone," he sobbed, "but O, the cause
Was not that thou were doomed to cruel lots—
It was not overwork, nor blows—it was The botts.

"From this time forward to be good I'll try—
You know I never, never did maltreat you—
And fondly hope in horse heaven, by-and-by,
To meet you."

When this elegy was shown to Mr. Roberts he said that he was not satisfied with it as the name of the noble steed was not mentioned, and future generations would be in ignorance thereof—something unthinkable. The bard once more sought the muse, and soon thereafter a slip with the following additional stanza appeared:

A rumbling dray the steed lay stiff and stark in—
The horses on the streets with terror fright'ning—
And the mourner drowned his sorrow after dark in Chain Lightning.

Peace then descended upon the bereaved, and the office force, in awed silence, resumed work.

To Stop The War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

With all the different suggestions being offered every day of how to stop the war, it occurred to me that if all the automobile manufacturers in the United States would tool up their equipment to produce 100,000 airplanes per week in place of 100,000 autos, we wouldn't have to send any of our boys over there to teach Hitler and company a lesson.

We have the money, the know how and the facilities to produce airplanes along the assembly line and the mere announcement that Henry Ford will produce 10,000 airplanes to help the Allied cause would strike fear and consternation into the Hitler-Stalin camp.

Money we can always replace—human lives never.

The End Of The War

Every time I get to wondering about when the war in Europe is going to stop, if ever, I always wind up with a laugh because this makes me remember how my home town learned the last one was over.

It took a pretty good attraction to stir up this sleeping little town, high on the clay banks above the muddy Alabama River. Something like the arrival from Mobile of that great old riverboat, the Nettie Quill, Otis Skinner, Maude Adams, a hanging, or the annual visit of Al G. Fields' famous minstrel show.

On the night of November 10, 1918, the town was a-buzz. We had two reasons to be a-buzz. Some of the dudes up on Dallas avenue—who read the Montgomery or Birmingham newspapers—got to saying the war was about over. This got people to talking. Then there was the Al G. Fields minstrels. They were due in town for a matinee and night show at the Academy of Music, the toney name for a louse-ridden opera house. This really made them talk.

I was then playing the bass drum in the Boy Scout Band and the combined anticipation of not having to lug that drum around the steaming streets for Liberty Loan drives and seeing Al G. Fields' minstrels was almost too much.

It must have been about 10:30 that night when they chased me off to bed. About an hour later, Fields and his men hopped the Western of Alabama gully-jumper out of Montgomery. The train got into my home town about the same time the news of the armistice did.

One of the first men to find out that the war was over was the chief of the fire department, whose name I need not mention, because he has now gone where there are no false alarms.

The chief was a man of action.

He uncorked a quart of corn, took a tremendous swig, put on his brass-buttoned coat and yelled for his hat. One of the boys handed it to him and the chief was so struck by this attention that he not only passed the quart around, but went and got another.

Thoroughly afire, the chief hot-footed it down to the Hotel Albert. He had an idea. He was going to get Al G. Fields out of bed, and Fields, his band, and the fire department were going to break the news of the armistice.

Mr. Fields was impressed with the news of war's end, but he wasn't very much impressed by the chief.

"Get the boys out," whooped the chief.

"What, now?" asked Fields, whipping out his watch, "Why, man it's 1 o'clock in the morning."

"What difference does that make?" asked the chief, "Here, have a drink."

Fields shook his head.

"All right," yelled the chief, "if you won't drink the boys will, I bet. Get 'em out!"

Mr. Fields related that the boys had just finished two shows in Montgomery, had ridden that chicken-killer over 52 miles of bumpy track, were dog tired and had two shows and a parade to do in our town.

"Makes no difference," said the chief, "get 'em out."

Fields tried to compromise.

"I'll have them ready by 6 o'clock," he said. "Why, man, they've got to get some sleep."

"Get 'em out now," shouted the chief.

"No," said Fields.

"All right," snorted the chief, "but I must say to you, sir, that you're a pretty poor sort of American who won't call his men out for the sake of his country. Why, Fields, you're a slacker!"

Mr. Fields went back to his bed. The chief went back to the fire department where he got his boys out.

Uncorking another quart, the chief ordered the boys to rush him some red paint and cheesecloth. It has always remained a civic mystery where the boys got these articles at that time of the morning, November 11, 1918—but they got them, and in great quantities.

Armed with a brush, the chief went to work.

"I'll get even with that slacker," he muttered, and he dug into the red paint.

At three minutes to 4, the fire department roared down the quiet, tree-lined streets of my home town, making more racket than the time the cotton gin blew up.

The horns were wide open. The sirens screamed. The chief and all the boys yelled, and brother, they could yell because they had the inspiration. The fire trucks backfired, the engines raced.

People piled out of their houses. Old man Willie Boggs—bed-stricken for 13 years—leaped from between the sheets and dashed out into the street cussing the Yankees and begging for a gun.

It was too dark at the moment to see what was going on.

When this rolling pile of pandemonium passed by our house, my father pushed my mother and me behind him and braved a look.

As the din went down the street he shook his head.

"The chief," he said, "is drunk."

We stood there looking out of the window and listening to fire trucks, the chief and the boys, racing through the town.

Came the dawn, and pretty soon the chief.

This time we could see him as well as hear him. See what he'd done with the cheesecloth and the red paint. He'd made banners out of the cheesecloth and stretched them on the fire trucks. The red paint he had employed to sum up the situation.

Every sign read the same:

"To Hell With the Kaiser and Al G. Fields—the War Is Over!"

About an hour later our editor got out an extra, Al G. Fields paraded at 6 a. m., but the chief had broken the news.

Congress Looks Ahead

By Mark Sullivan

Campaign Issues

CONGRESS is in that mood in which it looks forward to something more important than anything Congress itself can do. Partly unconsciously, Congress looks forward to a broader decision than any one decision it can make. It foresees the coming national political events—the national conventions, the Presidential nominations, the campaign, and the election—as deciding a broader issue than any one action of Congress on any one bill.

Some such mood is usual at this season. At all times, on the eve of a Presidential campaign, Congress tends to postpone action on some measures. Ordinarily, part of the motive is time. Always Congress likes to get through before the national conventions of the two parties. This year, the first of the conventions, the Republican, meets June 24. Some time before that is a probable date for the adjournment of Congress. Ordinarily too, part of the motive for postponing measures is disinclination to take a position on controversial issues a few months before a national election.

This year, the motive—or the vague state of mind less tangible than a motive—goes deeper. Congress senses that the months ahead will decide issues far more momentous than any one measure before Congress. There is a possibility that, for the first time in our history, the coming months may see the country pass judgment on the third-term tradition. Equally large with that issue, the country will pass judgment on the New Deal, as an experiment in society and government, novel to American tradition. Finally there is possibility that the war abroad may pass into a status which calls on America for important decisions. These larger issues ahead cast a shadow on Congress, and account for the likelihood that several of the measures now pending will not be finally acted upon.

THIS CONDITION works to the disadvantage of the party in power. For most of the more important measures now pending before Congress are attempts to modify laws enacted by the New Deal. They are attempts to reduce the New Deal. If these modifications do not pass, the original laws will stand in full force. To the extent that the original laws are unpopular, to the extent that there is general desire to have them modified, to that extent they are a handicap to the party in power, an asset to the opposition. The National Labor Relations Act unamended, is a greater campaign argument for the Republicans, than the Labor Act amended would be.

It is "the party in power" that suffers. But "the party in power" is not the same thing as the Democratic Party. It consists of the Democrats and the New Dealers. In this combination, the Democrats are the greater in number. The relations between the two consists of the Democrats carrying the New Dealers as a handicap. This will be seen by considering the Walter-Logan bill, and its present status.

The Walter-Logan bill is an attempt to restrain the New Deal along its whole front—to restrain it, though not to destroy it. The essence of the New Deal is an extension of the power of government over the individual citizen—without such an extension of the authority of government over the citizen, the New Deal could not exist. This extension of power is embodied in, and is essential to the working of, practically all the New Deal innovations.

TO CHECK THIS extension of authority, the Walter-Logan bill was written. Its purpose is, while permitting the New Deal innovations to continue and function, yet to preserve for the citizen his historic right of appeal, and of protection by a judicial body before which the citizen and the Government stand equal.

The Walter-Logan bill passed the House by 279 to 97, nearly 3 to 1. That is a measure of the wish to have the New Deal modified, restrained.

Especially striking was the division of Democrats on the measure. About 130 Democrats voted in favor, about 93 against. This division—130 to 93—is roughly the proportion of Democrats to New Dealers. Actually the number of New Dealers in the House is less than 93. Some Democrats who voted against the Walter-Logan bill are not New Dealers; they opposed the bill for the reason that it is, by general admission, not expertly written for its purpose.

What should now happen is that the bill should go to the Senate, should there be re-written, and thereafter should come to a vote. But, in these closing weeks, this is not likely to be done. It is probable the country will enter the coming campaign with the Walter-Logan bill not passed. Hence the conditions that gave rise to the demand for the bill, will continue as they were. The Democrats will be obliged to bear the burden of these unpopular conditions.

What is said here of the Walter-Logan bill applies also to the bills which attempt to amend the Wage-Hour Act and the National Labor Relations Act. The attempts at amendment are likely to fail. Whatever unpopularity attaches to the laws as they stand will be a handicap to the Democrats, an asset to the Republicans. The New Deal, substantially unmodified, will be an issue in the campaign.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

On Character

SOMETIMES WHEN people complain about modern existence I wish I could whisk them back to a primitive day when the going was really tough. I have in mind such a little thing as the lighting of a cigaret in a car, a simple and nonhazardous operation now, but one which was fraught with hardship and danger within the memory of us hardy survivors of a time when the means of existence were crude and life was lightly held. The method of the moment, borrowed from tomorrow, permits the driver to obtain a lighted cigaret by pressing a button on the wheel, whereas I can recall, as if it were yesterday, when it was necessary first to fish around for the cigaret and then to jab an electrical dasher and wait until it got red.

At that point it would click and was ready for use. But it was impossible to remember which dasher was the one for lighting cigarettes, and there was a great deal of groping at the choke and light buttons, with consequent loss of concentration on the road and risk of disaster. Then, having lit the cigarette, the primitive American often couldn't readily locate the hole to reinsert the lighter, and his fumbling with the right hand while the left hand held the wheel often led to infelicity, as when the wife of the driver would say, "Here, give me that damned thing and watch your driving. Smoke, smoke, all the time, and put the car in the ditch."

THE DIVORCE and wife-beating figures were very high about that period in American history, but shortly before that conditions were even worse, for along in there it was necessary to jab in the dasher and hold it by hand while the lighter got red. Only tomorrow there will be a device not only to produce a lighted cigarette but put it in the driver's mouth, and yet people complain and despair in low ingratitude for many blessings which ease the way through life.

In my day the driver had to be a giant of physical endurance, for he was called upon to give traffic signals by hand and even had to shift gears by a lever which came up through the floor on his right. We never thought to see a day when a flip of a little thing on the shifting handle would set signals blinking at the stern or, for that matter, when a handle would sprout, like Pinocchio's nose, from the steering post and gears could be changed by a simple finger motion.

But those were the days! Those were the days when, in some cars, those in the front seat had to climb out while the man removed the cushions to put in gas and people thought nothing of dragging themselves laboriously on foot 15, 30 or even 50 feet to the hamburger jook instead of sitting in comfort while cute little numbers in bare legs and short pants took the orders and brought them out on trays, and—perhaps not many remember, but I give you my solemn word I do—when you had to work your windshield wiper by hand and it wiped on only the driver's side of the car.

SOMETIMES I wonder how we came through it, but then it didn't seem so hard. We had never heard of zippers and everyone used buttons, hooks and eyes or, for some purposes, laces, and the cigarette holders had to put up with what would drive people to revolution now. There was no spring or plunger to discharge the butt of the smoked-up cigarette so we had to pick them out with our fingernails, sometimes getting burned and always soiling our fingers in the process.

Still, I don't really believe we complained as much as people do now. Of course, it was a nuisance to pry up the cap of a milk bottle with an ice pick or the prong of a fork instead of lifting it neatly off with a flap.

It was a hardship, too, to empty the pan under the icebox and chip off hunks with a pick for highballs instead of lifting off neat cubes, but, as I say, it was what we were used to. You probably won't believe that our radios had earphones instead of loudspeakers or that within the memory of people now alive the rubber wash wringer, with its deadly rollers, was in common use instead of the mechanical dryer, but it is so. The wash wringer caused some terrible accidents, but we laughed them off with a joke. I might tell you the joke.

Looking back now, I don't see where we got the courage to carry on. But I sincerely believe the answer was character. We had character and, if you want to know my opinion, character is the crying need of the American people today.

Limited Court Review

By O. R. McGuire

Chairman Committee on Administrative Law of the American Bar Association

A Reply To Ernest Lindley

MR. ERNEST LINDLEY, in his column in the May 3, 1940, issue of The Washington Post, seeks to inform his readers that the Logan-Walter administrative law bill is several times worse than a proposed amendment to the New York constitution which was rejected by the voters of that State. Mr. Lindley is as incorrect as to his facts in this column as he was in a previous column wherein he sought to disparage the Logan-Walter bill.

THE FACTS in this matter are that the New York constitutional committee in 1938 adopted and submitted to the people a number of proposed amendments to the New York constitution. Among these proposed amendments was one which provided that if any person should be aggrieved by a decision, order or other determination in the exercise of a judicial or quasi-judicial function by any administrative agency of a State or municipal corporation, that aggrieved person

". . . shall be entitled to a judicial review thereof, upon both the law and the facts, in a proceeding in the Supreme Court . . ."

and that the court should direct a reconsideration or a new hearing of the matter if such court determined

". . . such decision, order or other determination to be contrary to the evidence, or not supported by the facts."

The Logan-Walter bill provides in section 5 thereof that:

"Any decision of any agency or independent agency shall be set aside if it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the court (1) that the findings of fact are clearly erroneous; or (2) that the findings of fact are not supported by substantial evidence; or (3) that the decision is not supported by the findings of fact; or (4) that the decision was issued without due notice and a reasonable opportunity having been afforded the aggrieved party for a full and fair hearing; or (5) that the decision is beyond the jurisdiction of the agency or independent agency, as the case may be; or (6) that the decision infringes the Constitution or statutes of the United States; or (7) that the decision is otherwise contrary to law."

Mr. Lindley admits that he is not a lawyer, but any person who is able to read the English language can see that the proposed New York constitutional amendment would have required the Supreme Court of New York to review both the law and the facts in every decision, order or other determination which might be brought before that court from any State or city administrative agency and to require the agency to reconsider the entire matter if the court found the order to be contrary to the evidence and not supported by the facts. In other words, the court would have been required to weigh the evidence in every case.

NO SUCH requirement is made by the Logan-Walter bill, as the language of the bill clearly shows. What is more, the scope of judicial review under the Logan-Walter bill is even less than under the Interstate Commerce Act which has been in operation since 1887, or for more than 50 years. The Supreme Court of the United States has stated in Illinois Central Railroad Company vs. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441 that:

". . . it has been settled that the orders of the commission are final unless (1) beyond the power which it could constitutionally exercise; or (2) beyond its statutory power; or (3) based upon a mistake of law. But questions of fact may be involved in the determination of questions of law, so that an order, regular on its face, may be set aside if it appears that (4) the rate is so low as to be confiscatory and in violation of the constitutional prohibition against taking property without due process of law; or (5) if the commission acted so arbitrarily and unjustly as to fix rates contrary to evidence, or without evidence to support it; or (6) if the authority therein involved has been exercised in such an unreasonable manner as to cause it to be within the elementary rule that the substance, not the shadow, determines the validity of the exercise of the power."

The reader is requested to compare the language so quoted from a decision of the highest court in this country with the above quoted terms of the Logan-Walter bill and with the above quoted terms of the proposed New York constitutional amendment. Mr. Lindley is trying to draw a red herring across the trail.

AS A MATTER of fact, a member of the New York Constitutional Convention who supported the proposed amendment, sought my views with respect to it, and I advised him in a letter of August 22, 1939, that:

". . . I felt at the time that the New York judiciary article went too far and farther than was necessary. You can not compel the courts—in any event—to review something they do not want to review and the volume of administrative decisions in this country is so great that I have no doubt they would swamp any judicial system in the country if you tried to make it the mandatory duty to review every case on the law and the facts and if the courts accepted the task. It is unnecessary because if the courts have the authority to review the facts and the discretionary jurisdiction to reverse, modify or affirm the findings of facts, the courts will generally exercise that jurisdiction if a situation is made out where they should do so to correct wrong, fraud or injustice . . .

"And if such jurisdiction exists in the courts, the administrative agencies knew that it may be exercised in any case and they will strive to reach correct findings of facts and conclusions of law. After all, this is what we want."

Would Mr. Lindley have less? Would he have an administrative decision stand to the prejudice of an individual, however humble, if it was not supported by substantial evidence or was clearly erroneous or if it was contrary to both or either the Constitution and statute under which the Federal agency is supposed to operate?

As former Governor of New York and former Judge Nathan L. Miller states on July 2, 1938, a considerable body of opinion has developed that we have outgrown the Constitution of the United States and that:

"By the process of trial and error administrative law has been hit upon as the most effective weapon to destroy our institutions. Through its channels those, who have been called termites, can safely attack the foundation of our American system, for it has been discovered that administrative law screens them from judicial scrutiny. Oh, I know that when one swelled with arrogance oversteps the forms of due process he may not escape the judicial eye, but most of them are clever enough scrupulously to observe all the forms, while disregarding the substance, of due process, and they can do it in such a way as to thwart judicial review, as we all know."

The Once Over

Pullman Berths

We've had the three-decker sandwich and the three-decker bus and now we are about to get the three-decker railroad berth.

The Pullman company is turning out a combination coach-sleeper that will have the berths in three layers: lower, upper and stratosphere.

The new car will represent the combined talents of the railroad, the hotel, the trailer and the parlor-magic industries. Your chair is a railroad chair one moment and—presto—a three-passenger boudoir the next.

Through the new car the Pullman company carries the art of concealing plumbing to new heights. There are almost as many fixtures hidden under one seat as you will find in most plumbers' supply windows.

The new car is a de luxe coach without the conventional center aisle. The aisle is now about three points to starboard. There are accommodations for forty-five passengers. Nothing more than the appearance of the porter with a few mysterious motions is necessary to eliminate the seats and substitute the ground floor, mezzanine and terrace berths.

It has everything but elevator service between bunks.

When all three occupants desire to go to bed at once there is no problem. But it will become a matter for the American Railroad Association, the RFC, the SEC and the sundry private and Federal agencies when one man wants to turn in and the other two want to play rummy.

Elmer Twitchell's chief concern is that he will be in a lower on a rough road when two fellows in the uppers have breakfast in bed.

The modernization of railroad cars within the last few years has been amazing. So rapid has been the trend that when a man gets into an old-time railroad car today it is like climbing into a 1908 water-cooled Franklin roadster.

And what the roads have done to the dining cars is nobody's business.

They even have hostesses in 'em. She's the brunette who, when you enter all alone, holds up her index finger and asks, "One?" This shows how dizzy those diners are. We hope that whatever happens the roads don't put on three-decker diner tables.

"All Done By Mirrors."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

For "Italy" Read "Russia"

EVER SINCE Herr von Ribbentrop's visit to Rome and its sequel in the meeting between Mussolini and Hitler on the Brenner Pass, the Nazi government has been trying to push Italy into the war. Why? The reasons are by no means obvious. For it is generally agreed that while Italy might strike some hard blows, Italy does not have the means nor are the Italian people in a state of mind to support a long war. The usual view is that this tremendous propaganda and intrigue to involve Italy must, therefore, mean that Hitler has decided to risk everything on an attempt to win the war in a few months.

No doubt he means to try to win the war this summer. But though Hitler is a very bold man, he has never yet staked everything on any one enterprise; moreover, his military advisers are not likely to overestimate the power of Italy, and to suppose that Italian intervention as such could be decisive. Yet the Nazis seem to be very much interested in Italy, so much more interested than Italy's intrinsic power would seem to warrant, that one may wonder whether they are not using Italy as the means to a much greater end.

WE KNOW that Ribbentrop tried in March to form a triple alliance composed of Nazi Germany, Fascist Italy, and Soviet Russia. Apparently he failed. Though the possibility of a secret understanding is not to be excluded, Moscow has been acting as if it hoped to remain aloof from the war. There have been conciliatory moves by Russia towards Great Britain. Now the one thing that Hitler cannot afford to have happen is that Russia should draw away from him, should passively resist and sabotage his obtaining oil and other supplies, should exert pressure in Scandinavia, and, if things begin to go badly for Germany, should do what Russia has so often done before, should change sides in the war. We can be certain, I think, that, however much the Nazis may flatter Mussolini, the German high command will always be far more deeply concerned about Russia than about Italy.

Now, there is no way to obtain a full and reliable military alliance with Russia except by involving Russia in the war against the Allies—involving Russia on a large scale. Then Stalin's fate would be indissolubly bound up with Hitler's; he would fall if Hitler fell. Then Hitler could send his commanders, his organizers and his technicians into Russia, and Stalin would not only have to accept them, he would have to ask for them. In that event, even if Hitler failed to knock out the Allies this year, he would have gotten control of the Russian regime and he would have the potentialities of Russia to fall back upon. The most likely way of accomplishing all this is to use Mussolini to compel Stalin to enter the war.

THE EFFECT of Italian intervention would be to make Russian intervention almost compulsory. For while it would be impossible for Catholic Italy in cold blood to make an open alliance now with Communist Russia, an Italian invasion of the Balkans or an Italian campaign in the direction of Turkey and the Dardanelles would mean that Russia also had to move into the Balkans and towards the Dardanelles. Just as Russia had to participate in the partition of Poland, so Russia would have to participate in the partition of the Balkans, Turkey, and the Near East. Italy might be defeated. Turkey might resist victoriously. But from the German point of view Italy would have accomplished her mission by involving Russia in the war; if in addition the Italians could hurt the Allies, so much the better and if, on the other hand, Italy took a terrible beating, the Nazis would still have gotten Russia in their grip.

In all Hitler's enterprises he has had two objectives—a minimum objective which, fairly easy to attain, strengthens him defensively: a maximum objective, which, if attained, magnifies his offensive power. If Italy can be cajoled into intervention, Hitler will almost surely attain a minimum objective, which is to make Russia a military ally and thus to make Russia become, which it is not now, a reservoir of supplies to withstand the blockade.

THE MAXIMUM objective would be to bring to his support a coalition of aggressors the like of which the world has never seen before. For with Italy and Russia involved in the war on his side, he can attack the Allies in the north—with the Russians and the Italians he can attack Turkey and the Allies in the southeast—with Allied sea power under such an attack in the Atlantic and in the Mediterranean, and with Russia engaged in the European war, there will be neither a Russian army in Siberia to deter the Japanese nor the British and French fleets to deter them in the Southern Pacific. There will be only the United States Navy to deter the Japanese from seizing the richest colonial prize in all the world, and, all things considered, that may not be much of a deterrent.

If the plan works at its maximum efficiency, Italy's entrance into the war would create a quadruple alliance consisting of Germany, Russia, Japan, and Italy striking simultaneously or in a series of quick offensives at the vital points of the British, French and Dutch empires.

MUSSOLINI'S belief that Hitler can win the war before Italy's meager resources are exhausted must be based on the assumption that by some such concerted and world-wide attack the British and French power can quickly be destroyed. If he takes Italy into the war, he will be staking the fate of the Italian people on this grandiose gamble. But Hitler will be taking no such gamble as that. For if the plan fails, and Italy is sacrificed, Germany will still have Russia to fall back upon. Hitler can fail in his maximum objective and still attain a minimum objective: Hitler can fail in his offensive, and still, his army being intact and Russia under his control behind him, return to the defensive. But for Mussolini it is the maximum objective or ruin; for him the failure of this year's offensive would leave Italy in no position to fight a long defensive war.

For that reason Hitler and Mussolini are not dealing with each other as equal partners. Mussolini is the gambler who takes the supreme risk. With success he gets the lesser prize; in failure he has no insurance. Hitler, on the other hand, gains either way: If Italian intervention brings in Russia and Japan, he may become master of most of the world; if Italian intervention ends in a disaster for Italy, he will have gotten the Russian insurance against the worst effects of the Allied blockade.

That may be the reason why the Germans who have no high opinion of Italy's military prowess are using every device of their propaganda and their intrigue to drag the unwilling Italian nation into the war.

Books And Things

'Typical' Parents

"MY PARENTS were typical of the last quarter of the nineteenth century,' says Helen Thomas Flexner, introducing her "A Quaker Childhood" (Yale University Press $3). But Henry L. Mencken, born in the same Baltimore only a decade later than Mrs. Flexner, also asserted that his "Happy Days" was a record of a typical "larva of the comfortable and complacent bourgeoise" of a typical American city of the period—and a reader of the two books might not suspect that the two sets of parents had lived on the same continent in the same century. It was the period too of Clarence Day's famous "Father." They were all typical, and very very different.

YET THEY had their points in common. The mothers were all saints who yielded to their husbands and got around them. The men knew that it was a man's world, and acted on their knowledge. Mrs. Flexner's parents were, to be sure, progressive-minded Quakers, gentle and more civilized than the elder Days and Menckens, but they belonged to their period. Helen Thomas Flexner's eldest sister the redoubtable M. Carey Thomas, who won highest honors at the University of Zurich in the 1880s, and come home to found Bryn Mawr and thunder the equality of the female mind, had to fight her father to win her way to a coeducational college and when she returned from Europe, recognized as one of the intellectual prodigies of her day, the Thomas dinner table was an almost daily battlefield.

"Thee must acknowledge, Carey," said this Quaker parent, "that women have as yet done nothing to prove themselves the equals of men in originality or power of mind."

Carey Thomas mentioned George Eliot, Sappho and Queen Elizabeth.

FATHER THOMAS continued with what his youngest daughter calls "the momentum of the practised preacher"—and any one who has ever sat in Quaker meeting week after week will recognize the meaning of the phrase. (Nor is it limited to Quakers.) "A good woman," he said, "is more unselfish, more loving, far purer than the best man, but there is no man so abandoned, so lost to all decency as a fallen woman." That was a cardinal doctrine of the period.

"Bosh," said M. Carey Thomas; and her mother bravely ventured that the fallen women might be victims of wicked men who had corrupted them for their own sinister purposes.

That mother of the nine Thomases is presented as the central figure in Mrs. Flexner's story. Helen worshiped her—a woman of rare beauty, who managed a large household, taught her children to love poetry, presided over nine different worthy Baltimore organizations, and soothed Father into the bargain. But Mother Thomas belonged to her period. She believed, when painfully sick, that a just God was rewarding her for her sinful thoughts; and she instilled in little Helen what must seem to our post-Freudian generation to be a cruel sense of guilt.

Helen indeed must have been something of a prig. She tells her quaint story, with a conscientious honesty which seems sometimes to be pure science, sometimes art, and sometimes self-castigation.

Harold H. Sims, British Aide, Dies Suddenly

Duke of Windsor's Friend, 59, Collapses At Embassy Desk

Harold Haig Sims, old friend of the Duke of Windsor, and an honorary attache at the British Embassy, collapsed yesterday at his desk and died at 7 p. m. in his apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. He was 59.

A Canadian, Mr. Sims came here in 1919 and he and his wife became prominent in Washington society. He and Mrs. Sims were close friends of Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, a Republican Presidential candidate, who was notified of his death and took charge of funeral arrangements.

Friends said that his heavy duties since the outbreak of the European war contributed to his death. He collapsed at noon and was taken home immediately.

Born in Montreal, Canada, Mr. Sims engaged in banking in London, then returned to Montreal and entered the insurance business. There he remained until his appointment after the World War.

He was married in London in 1926. He was to have played host to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor during their proposed trip to the United States in 1937. The trip was canceled.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Sims, are his brother, Ross, and his mother, Mrs. Anthony Haig Sims, both of Montreal. There are no children.

Mr. Sims' body will be sent to Montreal today for services and burial there tomorrow.

Nazis Build Air Bases in Norway

is designated as chief of the German air force in Norway.

As director of the German Lufthansa he helped to lay the foundation for the German air force and German aircraft production in the days when German was still officially disarmed.

Double Purpose

According to views expressed here in foreign quarters and the Swedish press, the German air bases in Norway are expected to serve a double purpose.

The first is to try to break the British blockade, not merely by bombing the British blockade patrol ships in the North Sea, but also by constant raids on the eastern bases of the British fleet, in order to drive it out of the North Sea entirely and force it to take refuge along Britain's Atlantic shores. This, it is held, would open up the North Sea sufficiently for German merchant ships and commerce raiders to slip out into the seven seas and come back again.

The second purpose, for which the Norwegian air bases could serve, however, only as auxiliaries, is the long-contemplated direct air attack on British harbors and industrial areas. Pending the construction of long-distance pursuit and destroyer planes able to accompany the long-range bombers, such an attack is still considered to be a dubious military experiment that promises success only from air bases much nearer England than any in Norway.

Distances Compared

But even a partial success of the first project, it is held, would be a substantial gain for Germany, which is hard-pressed for supplies, especialy since the hoped-for Russian deliveries are tardy and threaten to become wholly dubious in case Italy enters the war.

In support of this view, it is pointed out how much easier it is to reach the North Sea bases of the British fleet from Norway than from Germany. The distance from the nearest German air base to the Firth of Forth is 830 kilometers, to Scapa Flow, 950 kilometers; to the Shetland Islands, 980 kilometers. But the Firth of Forth is only 615 kilometers from Stavanger, Scapa Flow is only 310 kilometers from Stavanger and 490 kilometers from Bergen, and the Shetland Islands are only 370 kilometers from Bergen—all easy flying distances for modern bombers.

On the way back from the West Coast, Mr. Roosevelt said, he might visit Isle Royale Park in Lake Superior and become the first Chief Executive to cruise on the Great Lakes.

By International News Service

Diplomatic quarters last night looked for an important announcement from President Roosevelt on American foreign policy Friday night when he welcomes delegates from the 21 Western republics to the eighth American Scietnific Congress.

The White House requested radio networks to be prepared to handle the speech if a decision for its broadcast is made.

Official quarters said the threatened spread of the European war to the Mediterranean might impel him to make some declaration of the inter-American attitude toward the conflict overseas.

Chamberlain's Political Life at Stake Today, Victory Seen

By the Associated Press

London, May 6.—Prime Minister Chamberlain lined up his forces tonight for the fight of his political life in Parliament.

The elderly statesman will open two days of full dress debate in Commons tomorrow with a lengthy statement on the Norwegian affair. He will defend and explain Britain's military setback in an attempt to stave off a critical offensive bent on breaking the premier and his ministry.

To counter opposition demands for a new government, some of which include the naming of Lord Halifax, foreign secretary, in place of Chamberlain, the prime minister is expected to announce greater power for stocky Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty.

A month ago Churchill was named chairman of a ministerial committee on military coordination, but since then Chamberlain has let it be known he himself still was in control.

Veteran political observers expressed belief that the Conservative government would ride out the storm but would be faced with an aroused and fighting opposition on every future measure.

The opposition claims the government sent troops to Norway knowing that no air bases would be available.

It declares that according to Chamberlain's speech of April 5, the government dispersed most of the forces assembled to help Finland although it knew as early as March 19 that Germany was contemplating a blow at Scandinavia.

Ready to tear apart the Chamberlain defense and to bid for a "government we can trust" is an assorted collection of angry Britons, including David Lloyd George, the empire's elderly statesman who led it to victory in the World War.

The Welshman's followers made it known that he would speak Wednesday against the "Man of Munich," whose policies Lloyd George has declared are leading Britain to "inevitable disaster."

The opposition's ranks also include Herbert Morrison and Clement Attlee for labor; Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war minister who still is bitter over losing that post soon after the start of this year, and rebels from the ranks of Chamberlain's own Conservative Party, such as L. S. Amery and Richard Law, son of former Premier Bonar Law.

On the nominal 615 seats in Commons, about 400 are held by Conservatives. Of these, 375 belong to members absolutely dependent on Capt. Henry Margesson, the government floor leader and whip, for approval of their campaign funds and the patronage which is doled out by the central committee of the Conservatives.

Some of these members are reported to have bolted to the opposition but one Liberal member of Parliament admitted that "there are not more than 40 of these and unless some startling admission is made in the House we may lose some of them."

Drama of Finnish War Deeply Touches New York Audience

It took the tag end of the ence of the year went out into Fifty-second street deeply touched and quite without the twittering which is part of these sparkling events.

The play is "There Shall Be No Night," by Bob Sherwood, and the stars are those New York darlings, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, who, in our local theater, can do no wrong. The play offers an answer that thousands of our people have been hunting—the why and wherefore of the current war, and a possible way of preventing such cataclysms. Sherwood has given his newest show an amazing spirituality—a strange compound of philosophy and deep religious feeling; and what is most astonishing, has put these qualities into a good drama—a remarkable feat. In short, the Lunts have done it again, thanks to Robert, with this play laid in a Finnish home as the tragedy struck.

As always, the Lunts brought out the carriage trade in full force. It was the gaudiest audience of the season, but its manners were perfect. Even Noel Coward was on hand, on leave from his war work in England.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Eileen Herrick, the girl who flouted parental authority for love, has now become a worker with prospects of a hot summer. She is a fur coat mannequin for a Fifth Avenue shop. George Lowther, her husband, sells insurance, drives his wife to work and takes her to lunch every day. Both of them are now as conspicuously absent from night clubs as they were once consistent habitues . . .

Irene Castle, asked to send her favorite waltz dress for exhibit in a charity display, sent a lovely gray-blue chiffon dress with gray fox fur bands at the elbows, accompanied by a wistful note saying she prized this dress beyond anything she has and please to allow only eyes, no hands, to rest upon it.

Fashions for Forever-Youthful Mothers

Next Sunday you can glow with pride at having the best-looking mother in town—if she is outfitted according to your own specifications. A head start might be the purchase of a new hat designed along dignified, yet youthful lines. The one shown below, from a local shop's "Mother's Day" collection, would be the answer. It is of fine navy Swiss hair braid, banded in Lyons velvet—a patrician young hat for older faces

For the younger mother, local florists propose an unusual corsage of fresh lily petals surrounding a cluster of carnations. If you're out of town, you might wire a pottery bowl filled with pansies and sweet peas

More Color, Less Black, White, Featured in Mother's Clothes

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

Marshall Adams

MOTHERS' clothes really are getting more human and understandable. Each year the fashion scribes hopefully point out a "new found womanliness and grace" along come Mother's Day—but they seem now to have really found the formula. This formula proposes less black and white and more personal freedom in youth - giving clothes expression.

Navy blue is the substitute tried by many conservative Washington mothers in or past their fifties. Navy, they find, actually gives a softer glow to aging skins while a hint of pink lingerie or accessory adds almost a schoolgirl blush.

Black with a suggestion of red, poilu blue or yellow are other smart gestures. And there is such graciousness to the spring and summer grays and gray-blues that these colors not only look fresher but more sophisticated than the usual black shrouds. Often witty veiled significances (such as the symbol and alphabet prints) force staid matrons into a sense of humor.

Immaculate frou frou of lingerie, colored belting ribbon or just the wearer's own lovely jewels are sufficient color accent to the matron's blue, gray or beige costume. Never should an overdose of jewels be worn on or off Mother's Day and not even to hide a dowager's hump. The wealthy, corpulent matron is apt to look vulgar; the frail, twittering matron, fussy and silly. Pearl earrings and necklace, plus the wedding band, are still the safest jewel selections for the perfect mother unless she looks like Hedda Hopper or the Duchess of Windsor, in which case she can affect interesting gadgets to her heart's content. (If she's this type it goes without saying she'll possess natural restraint.)

One of the most charming gestures for Mother's Day or any other day is the hat-hunting spree with mother for exactly THE hat you've always wanted her to wear when she goes to church, visiting or strolling on May 12. One Washington store has just received a distinguished collection of hats for this purpose. They are definitely not "mama hats," first because they were selected by a man who doesn't believe in head-heavy millinery, and secondly, because almost every woman today is freed of the feeling that 50-odd years must relegate her to cumbersome long hair and dowager hats.

These new styles feature kettle-edged brims for wavering face lines (the brims are not too large or theatrical in line), softened bumper brims for brisk features and suave Watteau turned-up brims, flaring at just the crucial angle. The soft milans, Swiss braids or even veiled piques have the simplicity of line, rightness of minute detail and charm of youth, plus subdued colorings to appeal to matured tastes.

96% Deficient In Vitamin D And Calcium

Tests Reveal Tie Between Poor Diet And Near-Sightedness

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU are one of the untold thousands of nearsighted persons, it is possible that you also take your place among the estimated 96 per cent who fail to get sufficient calcium and vitamin D—the vitamin being essential to the utilization of the mineral.

Significant developments in the dietary treatment of eye troubles point to a clear-cut connection between myopia and the low calcium, vitamin D deficient diet. Various authorities have come to regard myopia as a form of scleral rickets. One scientist has called attention to the parallel between a calcium deficiency and the rapid advance of myopia. Another, who examined 15 cases of nearsightedness, found that 14 had a low blood calcium.

Recent experiments tend to confirm the earlier reports. Nearsightedness was induced in dogs by feeding them on a diet deficient in the two elements. In the close study of the animals it was noted that their condition grew progressively worse with advancement of the dietary deficiency.

Test Cases Successful

From thousands of cases at one of the leading New York clinics, a group of patients was selected for observation over a period of time varying from several months to more than two years. All members of the group were chosen because their condition was expected to become steadily worse. But as a result of dietary treatment, the majority registered an improvement in their eyesight as to distance. In 50 per cent the condition was either improved or its progress checked. And, in general, the vision of the group was much better and the characteristic poor muscle tonus of the eyes had greatly improved.

The treatment of these cases consisted of calcium in the form of mineral mixture tablets and vitamin D in the form of viosterol Milk is the richest common source of calcium. The patients who drank a quart of milk a day were considered to need only one mineral tablet. For each glass less than one quart, two tablets were prescribed to boost the calcium intake.

Ask Your Doctor

From numerous experiments it appears that only about 4 per cent of the people follow a diet sufficiently high in calcium and vitamin D. Some of those do not properly utilize what they get. If you suffer seriously from nearsightedness, you might like to call your doctor's attention to the new dietary experiments. Certainly it would pay you to examine your daily menus.

For a normal diet, these calcium-rich foods should be included daily: One quart of milk for children, one pint for adults; plus cheese, eggs and vegetables. The best natural source of vitamin D is sunshine, next the irradiated foods. The pharmaceutical sources are the fish oils—cod liver, haliver and viosterol.

The importance of diet to healthy eyesight is not new. It has long been recognized that sufficient vitamin A is essential for the prevention of night blindness. The research on calcium and vitamin D still further emphasizes the value of a high vitamin, high mineral diet in a specific as well as a general health role.

DeGoofey Gains

REINFORCEMENTS have come to Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey in her fight to retain the presidency of the Do Something About It League against the opposition of Mrs. Arabella Wadd, widow of the nut cup magnate. The Association for Advancement, representing the younger reform element, has come out flat-footedly in support of the DeGoofey ticket.

Mrs. DeGoofey

At her press conference yesterday, Mrs. DeGoofey, wearing a chipper new sailor, made public a letter from this organization, whose membership is secret, but whose headquarters are listed as 11 Maple avenue, Hyattsville, Md. Following is the letter:

Tells Mrs. Wadd Where to Get Off

"DEAR MRS. DeGOOFEY: At the second anniversary meeting of the Association for Advancement the members went on record in regard to the presidential campaign of the Do Something About It League in the following resolution:

" 'DeGOOFEY'S DE GIRL WE GO FOR,
WHY WADDLE WITH WADD?'

"We feel that the election of a conservative candidate, such as Arabella Wadd, would defeat the very purpose of the Do Something About It League, and who wants to be conservative anyhow? If Cape Cod wants Wadd, let them have her. We'll take Henrietta with her progressive ideas. What this country needs is more Henriettas.

"Mrs. Wadd's reference to the present incumbent's hats incited the indignation of all our members, particularly since the picture of Arabella recently published certainly offered no improvement in headgear; in fact if we may say so, she seemed to have perched on her thick head something resembling a cockscomb.

"Also Mrs. Wadd seems a bit reluctant to state her platform, merely saying that she would stand firmly on the Constitution of the United States and Emily Post. We are sure anything on which Mrs. Wadd stands firmly still stay firmly stood on. We do not choose to stand still, it is our earnest desire to move forward with DeGoofey. Her record speaks for itself.

"Mrs. DeGoofey has inspired our members to crusade for the betterment of humanity. Some notable examples of what we are attempting to accomplish are listed below:

"The manufacture of one shade of hose only—mud color; also cellophane goloshes, which could be discarded after each using, thereby eliminating the ruination of shoes and hose by the use of those now on sale.

"Reduce the outrageous charges made by barber shops on baldies; 5 cents is considered a sufficient price.

"Air-cool busses in summertime.

"Remedy the problem of nude statues—as some of the girlies certainly aren't Sally Rands. In addition to being unesthetic and scandalous, it is inhuman to leave the poor women and children exposed in all kinds of weather. We feel that nude statues should be draped in cheese cloth, make-up applied on women and permanents given at least twice a year.

"Perhaps, Mrs. DeGoofey, you would like to include some of these measures in your platform. Sincerely yours, ASSOCIATION FOR ADVANCEMENT.

Stockings and Statues To Be Investigated

"I am greatly heartened by the support of these brave young women of the Association for Advancement," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "I shall put all their proposals in my platform and I shall start doing something at once about having all hose made the same color. As it is, no woman can ever find the color she wants in the make, thread or size she wants. Moreover, if she does get a color fairly acceptable—in spite of the clerk's indifference—and ends with a stray stocking, she is never able to match it. How hose manufacturers can manage to change their entire gamut of colors every week or two is something I intend to investigate.

"I am also interested in cellophane goloshes having suspected for a long time that the makers of goloshes were in cahoots with shoe manufacturers to ruin shoes as rapidly as possible.

"As to the statues, I am going to confer at once with Schiaparelli and other designers about having some modish ensembles created for the poor neglected women in stone, and also for providing them parasols on hot summer days.

"I am always glad to get suggestions for my platform and I hope others of my supporters will write in. I am always willing to reform anything or anybody, and once I get Mrs. Wadd disposed of, nothing this side of the Rhine can stop me."

Fortified Flour Makes Debut in Interest of Health

IN THESE troubled days of fortifications, it is good news to hear that there is one fortification that bids well for health benefits. Dr. W. H. Stroud, executive secretary of the Soft Wheat Millers Association announced recently that fortified flour is now being made available to the public.

Food industries have been adding ingredients in correct proportion, such as vitamin D to milk, vitamin A to butter, and iodine to salt, for some time. Now we find, according to Dr. Stroud, that some millers are contributing to a better national health by the addition of vitamin B1, and other vitamins and minerals to flour. The addition is not a cure for acute deficiency disease states Dr. Stroud, but for the average person who is not ill, yet is not receiving the proper nutritional components, such fortifications is providing special dietary needs, which are just as essential as the carbohydrates and proteins in bread and meat.

Orange Biscuits made with fortified flour would be a vitamin special. For those who like the flavor of orange in their biscuits the following recipe will make fluffy biscuits:

Orange Biscuits

Sift before measuring, 1¾ cups flour. Resift with 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1¼ teaspoons salt, 1 tablespoon sugar. Add grated rind of 1 orange to dry ingredients. Cut 2 tablespoons butter into dry ingredients with pastry blender, or 2 knives, until mixture is consistency of corn meal. Make a well in center and pour in ¾ cup milk. Stir vigorously until dough is fairly free from sides of bowl. Turn dough onto slightly floured board. Knead gently and quickly for about half a minute. Roll dough with a lightly floured rolling pin or pat gently with palm of hand until it has desired thickness—about one-quarter inch. Cut biscuits with biscuit cutter. Place biscuits on greased sheet or pan. Dip a piece of loaf sugar quickly into orange juice and press into biscuit gently. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes.

Judge Bentley Renominated By Roosevelt

Juvenile Court Jurist Named for Another Six-Year Term

JUDGE BENTLEY

Senator Ashurst (Democrat, of Arizona, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, referred the nomination to a subcommittee composed of Senators King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman; McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

Senator King said last night that no hearings were scheduled, but that hearings would be held "if there is any substantial demand for them."

A native of Bloomington, Ill., Judge Bentley studied social work at the University of Chicago. She came here 20 years ago, to investigate taxes on goods produced by child labor, as an employe of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Formerly in Labor Dept.

After the Child Labor Act was declared unconstitutional, Miss Bentley joined the staff of the Labor Department Children's Bureau, where she served until 1925. Then she went to work for the Board of Education and was director of school attendance until appointed to her present post October 25, 1933.

Miss Bentley's first appointment was approved over the opposition of a number of groups. After becoming a judge, she sought legislation which was enacted June 1, 1938, to change her court from a criminal court to a bureau which would deal informally with misdoers younger than 18.

Nazi Bombers Use Sight Like Secret U. S. Device

Berlin, May 6 (AP).—Expert sources revealed tonight the German air force has developed and used in raids at Namsos and Narvik a new bomb-sight comparable in accuracy to the secret device used by the United States air forces.

The device not only gives German fliers increased sighting accuracy, these experts said, but they claimed that the release device is far beyond anything that previously had been developed.

Mrs. Roosevelt Greets Women in U. S. Service; Two White House Garden Parties Due Today

Six Cabinet Ladies Assist Her at Event, Attended by Hundreds of Feminine Executives In Federal Agencies, Who Enjoy Lovely Affair

SEVERAL HUNDRED members of the Capital's "petticoat government" attended the garden party at which Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess at the White House yesterday afternoon. Two similar affairs are on her schedule today. She will entertain at the annual Red Cross garden party at 3:30 p. m., and from 4 to 6 o'clock she will be hostess to another large company. A luncheon and a number of other appointments also are on her calendar for today.

Hope Ridings Miller

From 4 to 6 o'clock yesterday, the First Lady and six Cabinet hostesses, along with four women representing the other executive departments, received around 1,800 women executives on the Government pay roll.

One garden party does not make a summer, but certainly none that will take place this season can have a lovelier setting than I saw yesterday. Row on row of red tulips and beds of pansies were in full blossom in the formal south garden through which guests walked on their way to the grassy south lawn, where Mrs. Roosevelt received. Scarlet coats of the Marine Band matched the tulips that circled the fountain pool. More bright red hats than I've seen in ages dotted the crowd that lingered on to listen to the Marine Band's concert.

Meanwhile, scores of guests collected around the red and white striped marquees beneath which gallons of red lemonade and cakes were served.

IN OTHER YEARS, I have noted a number of sweeping frocks at this annual garden party. But yesterday street-length dresses were very much the order of the day. Mrs. Roosevelt, however, appeared in trailing figured chiffon, featuring cornflower blue flowers on a white background, a matching blue velvet sash and a broad-brimmed straw hat of the same shade.

Standing with her were Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, whose sky blue crepe dress was worn with a rose-beige straw hat that matched her shoes; Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, in a blue and white ensemble; Mrs. Charles Edison, whose green print frock was worn with a hat of the same shade and a short beige jacket; Mrs. Harold Ickes, wearing a henna redingote over a print frock and a brown straw hat; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, whose smart navy blue dress was set off with a pale pink jabot; and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, in a black and white costume.

Also in the line were Mrs. Sumner Welles, who was filling in for Mrs. Cordell Hull. The latter will return tomorrow from Atlantic City where she and the Secretary of State have been spending a few days.

STILL OTHERS receiving with Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday were Mrs. Daniel W. Bell, representing the Treasury Department; Mrs. William W. Howes, representing the Postoffice Department, and Mrs. Edward J. Nobel, representing the Department of Commerce.

A number of social events were on Mrs. Roosevelt's calendar yesterday. The ladies of the Cabinet lunched with her at the White House and last evening there was a dinner for a company that stayed on for a musicale in the East Room.

Featured artist of the latter event was Miss Jean Christian, harpist, formerly of New York and now of Miami Beach. Several numbers were given by the Howard University Glee Club under the direction of Roy Tibbs, and by Caterina Jarboro, soprano, and Todd Duncan, baritone.

Prior to her press conference yesterday morning, Mrs. Roosevelt received the Frankfort, Pa., Women's Club and a number of pupils from the Cathedral Girls' High School of New York.

IN ADDITION TO the two garden parties at which she will receive today, Mrs. Roosevelt will speak this evening before the Arlington County Tuberculosis Association. The First Lady will be out of town the remainder of the week. Next Monday she will attend the meeting of the Long Island Council of Social Agencies in New York and will return to Washington on the midnight train. Her next press conference will be next Tuesday at 11 a. m.

Mrs. Baruch arrived here Sunday morning from Miami, where she had spent the winter and early spring season and was joined by her husband who got here about the same time from New York.

Miss Ballantine Plights Troth

Of much interest to Washington as well as New York is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Atwood Ballantine, of New York and Oyster Bay, Long Island, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Ballantine, to John Haven Ferguson, of Hockley, Arlington, Va.

He now is associatd with the general counsel's office of the Treasury Department and is among the dozen young bachelors who live at Hockley, the Theodore Wilkinson residence across the river in Virginia. N., and their family she will sail for their new station in Hawaii at the end of this month. Mrs. James Sargent Russell, wife of Lieut. Russell, U. S. N., was hostess at the affair on the sun porch of the Army-Navy Country Club.

Garden Party At Club Beats Weather Jinx

Miss Edgar Hostess With Mrs. Jones at 1925 F Street Fete

Officials, residents and members of the press mingled at the pleasant cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Miss Hazel Edgar ad Mrs. Mary MacCracken Jones.

Though hostesses have tried for weeks to give a party in the garden of the 1925 F street club, Miss Edgar and Mrs. Jones are the first the weather has favored this season. Small tables were set up outside and here everybody gathered in small and congenial groups.

A delicious champagne punch was served from a buffet in the dining room, and waitresses passed the tea-time specialties for which the F street club is noted. There were platters of turkey sandwiches on wholewheat bread, liberally sprinkled with black pepper, and several other specialties of the maison.

Seen here and there: Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin visiting at various tables . . . Mrs. John R. Williams chatting with Mrs. Randall Hagner, handsome in pale yellow with a little flower turban. . . . Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, the latter just back from New York . . . and dozens of others.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

SINCE GREENLAND seems about as real to most Americans as Shangri-La, James Penfield and George West have been the center of great curiosity since the State Department ordered them to be the first representatives ever sent by us to that Arctic land.

The two young men will embark from New York on Friday aboard the Comanche, an icebreaker which is used up and down the Hudson River during the winter. This fiercely named bark was ordered because the Greenland port is still frozen. There is no regular steamship line to Greenland, so the pair will have to wait until another cutter comes around before they get any mail. Even tourists are not allowed in Greenland, except by special permission of the authorities.

WHEN MR. PENFIELD and his colleague set up an office there, they will be in charge of the largest consular district in the world and the only one without a single American citizen. Nothing but Danes and Eskimos.

The couple are loading up with heavy clothes—also dinner jackets, which it seems are worn by diplomats even in Greenland—and expect to invest in sealskin suits when they get there. Mr. Penfield says he is "slightly stunned" by the orders, as he has spent all his foreign service duty heretofore in China.

Since all communications between Copenhagen and Greenland were cut off after the German invasion, our State Department got together with Greenland and decided to start diplomatic representation. Messrs. Penfield and West expect to be called for next September and brought back to civilization again.

COLOSSAL RECEPTIONS are certainly the thing this spring, but Zeva Fish's party broke all debut records. Two thousand five hundred were invited to the tea, at which her parents, Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, were hosts.

However, nobody had their toes stepped on, as setting for the party was the huge Larz Anderson house, now headquarters for the Society of the Cincinnati. There was dancing in the ballroom, while others stood on the balcony to watch the scene.

Here and there: The German Charge d'Affaires, Hans Thomsen, threading his way through the crowd . . . The pretty assistants, in floor-length dresses which whirled out as they danced: Ellen Flowerree in cool white chiffon, Nancy Glover in a pastel plaid skirt and pale green blouse, Barbara Beale, whose lemon-yellow frock almost matched her hair.

Friendly Mrs. Robert A. Taft bowing to Mme. Procope, whose black coat was trimmed with silver fox at the hem; Mrs. Harry Baxter, sporting a bevy of big purple orchids on her shoulder; Social Secretaries Marian Trumbull and Mrs. Wallach Merriam getting together; Chick and Bill MacCracken, and 1,985 others.

THE ANDERSON HOUSE, with its high ceilings, tapestry-hung rooms and general air of elegance, is becoming a favorite scene for debutante parties. Senator and Mrs. Warren Barbour have just issued invitations to a dance there June 8 in honor of their lovely debutante daughter, Elysabeth.

ARRIVING THIS WEEK for a stay with Mrs. Barbour is Mrs. James Barbour. The two are both sisters and sisters-in-law. The Senator and his wife will give a dinner next Sunday for the visitor and Mrs. Sidney Lee, another sister, has asked a small group to dine on Saturday. Later the crowd will go dancing.

THE DISTINGUISHED married team of Senor and Senora de Labarca were among the guests at the pleasant cocktail party given the other afternoon by the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Gazitua. Senor Labarca is former Minister of Defense for Chile and was also mayor of Santiago. His wife is a leading professor and is also among the women delegates to the American Scientific Congress, which meets here next week.

OTHER GUESTS included the Ambassador of Chile, the Mexican Envoy and Senora de Castillo Najera, and, from the State Department, the Laurence Duggans, the Paul Daniels and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsa'.

THAT COUPLE seen creeping furtively around the airport on Sunday was Representative Sol Bloom and daughter, Vera. They were a secret committee to welcome Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, whose arrival for the Actors Guild benefit had been kept from the public for fear they would be mobbed by fans.

When the couple alighted finally, the Blooms whisked them around for a view of the White House and other landmarks. This was their first visit here, and they kept exclaiming, "How green it all is!" Later that evening, when Miss Bloom arrived at the theater to usher at the benefit, a flying wedge of children blocked her exit from the car.

"Vivien Leigh's in there—you're hiding her!" they all screamed. Vera barely escaped without any broken bones.

The Argentine Ambassador, Felipe A. Espil, will entertain at a diner on Wednesday, May 15, for Argentine delegates to the American Scientific Conference, which meets here next week.

Mme. Horinouchi will entertain at luncheon today at the Japanese Embassy.

Mrs. James Denby has arrived from South Africa, and is staying with her uncle, George Bond Cochran, at his house on Ninteenth street. She will be in Washington for the remainder of the month.

Dr. Turbay Pays Tribute To Santander

Colombian Envoy Holds First Large Embassy Reception

Entertaining at the first large reception since his arrival here, the dapper Columbian Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay, was host at a party yeterday in the flower-filled Embassy on Twentieth street. The affair was in celebration of Gen. Francisco de P. Santander Day—it was just 100 years ago that the first president of Colombia took office.

Latin-American diplomats turned out to celebrate with the popular ambassador. The spacious rooms of the embassy were adorned with flowers. Whisky and soda, as well as champagne, were served in the paneled library. A banquet table, laden with turkey, salads of every description, pate de foie gras and ice cream, ran along one side of the ballroom.

Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, wore a cluster of pink flowers at her waist—the motif being repeated in her smart hat. The Mexican Ambassador and Senora Castillo Najera were there, she in a smart black outfit. The French Ambassador. Count Rene de Saint-Quentin chatted with a group of South Americans while not far away were the Charge d'Affaires of Germany and Frau Thomsen.

Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, reported that her daughter, Laura, had returned from Guatemala the night before. Having a gay time at the party were Senorita Beatrice de Samper, daughter of the Counselor of the Embassy and Senorita Blanca de Vargas, whose father is secretary of the Embassy. Others included Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Vera, the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, Mrs. William Culbertson in a fetching flower hat, the Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins; the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky, she in a china blue frock, and many, many others.

The Glovers To Give Dance For Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carrol Glover have issued invitations to a dance in honor of their daughter, Miss Nancy Glover, June 1 at Grasslands. Miss Glover was presented to society at a large reception given by her parents a year ago on the lawn of their home on Massachusetts avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Glover were hosts at dinner last night.

Another gay party at Grasslands will be the dance May 29, for which Arthur Bradley Campbell has issued invitations. The party will honor his debutante cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser.

Fish Calls for Peace In Republican Drive

New Yorker Tells Women's League Party Must Not Pussyfoot and That Election Should Be a Referendum on Neutrality

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The Republican Party must be a party of peace and write a peace program into its platform, Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, a Presidential "possibility," declared yesterday.

Addressing the final meeting of the League of Republican Women at the Mayflower Hotel, he asserted there must be "no pussyfooting," that the coming election should amount to a referendum on the issue. He advocated "millions or billions for national defense but not one cent to send a single American soldier to foreign soil to fight other people's battles."

"We'd have a dictatorship under Roosevelt in 48 hours if this country were involved in the war," he declared, "with a blackout of American institutions and liberties as bad as those of the Nazis, Fascists or Communists."

He asserted he was "an isolationist from foreign wars unless we were attacked" but not from good will or humanitarian aid to war-stricken people.

Representative Fish said the United States Navy was "six times greater than the German navy" and denounced "inspired propaganda" to the effect that this country was in danger of attack. "If we were to believe it," he said, "we would look under the bed every night for fear of finding a Nazi or a Jap."

He assailed New Deal policies, including the buying of foreign gold. He charged the New Deal had failed to carry out the promises on which it went into power and that, despite the huge expenditures of money, unemployment was still the major domestic problem, while the attitude toward business had destroyed confidence. "Labor does not want a dole, it wants work," he declared, pointing out that there were billions of idle dollars in banks and millions of idle hands.

He warned that the Democratic Party had "huge sums at its disposal and evidently expects to use them," referring to the proposal that the President be given discretionary power over WPA funds. This would mean, he said, that they need not be spent over the period of the entire year, but could all be used in eight months. One year, he stated, 500,000 men were put on WPA in September and October, prior to election, and were taken off afterward.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the league, presided at the meeting and at the business session which preceded it. Representative Fish was introduced by Mrs. William S. Culbertson, who mentioned that he was from the same New York district as President Roosevelt and therefore "his representative in Congress."

Committee chairmen announced for the coming year are Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy, finance; Mrs. Culbertson, program; Mrs. G. Louis Weller, entertainment; Mrs. Paris E. Brengle, membership; Mrs. Edson W. Briggs, publicity; Mrs. William N. Doak, printing; Mrs. George S. Hart, house; Miss Daisy Prentice, auditing; Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, hostess; Mrs. J. H. Branson, committee on headquarters; Miss Edna Patton, luncheon, and Mme. Cantacuzene, advisory.

First Lady Views Two Sets of Twins At Crittenton

Two sets of twin girls, aged 4 and 9 months, engaged the attention of Mrs. Roosevelt on a tour of the Florence Crittenton Home, 4759 Reservoir road, at the tea and open house, where she was guest of honor yesterday afternoon. The First Lady also talked briefly to the 52 girls now residents of the home, and inspected their needlework.

The tea was given by the board of managers for Community Chest giver-designators of the home. Mrs. Fred Mitchell, past president of the board, introduced the guests to the receiving line, in which were Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, president emeritus; Mrs. J. C. Freeland, president; Miss Jean Cole, superintendent of the home; Mrs. C. J. Riggall, Mrs. George Price, Mrs. A. J. Somerville, Mrs. J. F. Macoughtry and Mrs. John Chase. Mrs. Thornton Owen was general chairman.

Among the guests were Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mme. Lombard, of the French Embassy; Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Reba Barrett Smith, Dr. Robert Barrett, Mrs. Felix Morley and Mrs. Justin Miller.

Society Elects Mrs. Deal Again

Mrs. W. W. Deal was re-elected president of the Sunshine and Community Society yesterday at its annual May breakfast at the Shoreham Hotel. More than 150 members and guests attended the affair, at which Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, was speaker, and Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, guest of honor.

Representative Fish discussed the foreign situation and urged that this country keep out of war. Commending the purpose of the society to spread sunshine in the community, he remarked that if nations were doing, in the world, what it is doing in the community, there would be no war.

On the program with him were George H. Miller, barytone, who sang, accompanied by Mrs. Elsie Harvey Weaver; Mrs. Charles H. Bair, past president, who presented dramatic readings, and Mrs. Deal, the president, who not only presided, but also sang a group of songs. The invocation was by the Rev. Cresteen Smith, D. D.

Officers reelected to serve with Mrs. Deal were: Mrs. F. W. Shortall, first vice president; Mrs. Maurice Emerson, second vice president; Mrs. R. King Stone, recording secretary; Mrs. A. T. Reid, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Samuel G. Kerry, treasurer; Mrs. Edward Stevens, auditor; Mrs. F. S. Mulkern, director; Mrs. Edward Stevens and Mrs. J. Noble Hoover, alternate directors. Mrs. J. Edwin Reid was elected as a new director to succeed Mrs. Henry Sawtelle.

Mystery Writer Tells the Congressional Club How She Gathers Murder's Raw Materials

"ADVENTURES in buzzardry" is Zenith J. Brown's term for her experiences in seeking material for the mystery stories she writes under the pseudonyms of Leslie Ford and David Frome.

Members of the Congressional Club were entertained last week at their Friday tea with her accounts of "Fascinating Mysteries" she has discovered in her search for material. Tall and slender, with dark brown hair curling around the blue print turban, matching the frock under her gray redingote, she presented a picture of what no one would expect David Frome or Leslie Ford to look like.

It's not the murder that interests readers of mystery stories said Miss Brown, but the solution, showing the motives and events leading up to the crime. She insists that the murders in her own stories are "just red velvet spots on the carpet that can be rolled right up and put out of the way."

She attended the Congressional Club tea through the courtesy of Mrs. Bruce Barton. Mrs. Edward Burke, president of the club, presided.

FASHION NOTE—And, while I listened to Miss Brown's description of literary "buzzardry," I also tried to figure out who was under the smart little black straw hat ahead of me, that was all but covered with bright red currants which looked as though they had come right off the bush. When the program was over I discovered the wearer was Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg. She also wore, on the pocket of her black tailored suit, a little elephant pin, charging forward in a way that indicated the Republicans expected to go places this season.

TALKS ON WASHINGTON—Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, of Chevy Chase, honorary president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, will go to Hampstead today to speak at the high school on "Reminiscences of Washington" in a program sponsored by the Hampstead Woman's Club. She will be accompanied by Mrs. William F. Henry and both will be guests of Mrs. Walter E. Kriel at luncheon.

PLAN AHEAD—The welfare secretaries of the eight Washington chapters of Sigma Phi Gamma international sorority met last night at the home of Jane Colbert, Epsilon Province president, to discuss plans for the organization's welfare program for the coming season. Each of the chapters is contributing to a fund which will be used to aid some local charity.

Members of the Washington group are already looking toward the international convention of the sorority to be held in Atlantic City in June of next year, in which they will take an important part. They will have plans to announce at this year's conclave which will be held in Minneapolis, Minn.

City-Controlled Parking Areas Urged for D. C.

Woman's Safety Group Urges Survey on Need Of 'Off-Street' System

Municipally-controlled parking areas as an economy measure were advocated yesterday by Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the women's safety committee of the American Automobile Association.

Addressing a meeting of the committee held in the minority conference room of the Senate Office Building, she discussed parking problems of other cities and their solution. She had appeared before a recent session of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations on this subject.

What Other Cities Do

In Los Angeles, said Mrs. Thorpe, the merchants paid $150,000 a year to provide parking facilities for customers who made purchases of $1 or more. In Milwaukee, according to a survey four years ago, $1,300,000 was spent by parkers. In Pittsburgh $1,200,000 was spent to widen a street to provide an additional lane on either side, allowing parking space for 144 cars. At this rate, the parking space for a single car was estimated to have cost the city $1,300. Curb parking is costly, she pointed out.

The Women's Safety Committee and the A. A. A. have asked for an amendment to the District appropriations bill, calling on the District Commissioners for a survey of the needs and the possibilities of off-street parking for the District, the report to be made next January. No additional appropriation would be required for this, according to Washington I. Cleveland, of the District of Columbia Motor Club, as the engineer's staff could handle it.

Asks Drivers' Courses

The women's committee also is seeking to have such a drivers' course as is now in Abbot Vocational School added to a colored vocational school and to one colored and one white high school, and has asked for more motorcycle police to handle traffic.

Burton W. Marsh, national safety director of the American Automobile Association, announced plans for the National School Patrol parade Saturday. He termed the patrols "one of the greatest youth movements in this country."

At the close of yesterday's meeting, members of the committee were entertained at luncheon in the Senate private dining room, with Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, whose wife is a member of the group, as host.

Y. W. C. A. Lodge To Hold Dinner

The Vacation Lodge winter social committee, of which Miss Edith Christie is the chairman, will hold a banquet tonight at 6:15 at the Y. W. C. A. in honor of Miss Edith Young, new director of the lodge. Former residents and those interested for the coming season, June 1 to October 1, have been invited.

Vacation Lodge, the Y. W. C. A. summer residence for business girls in Cherrydale, Va., is filling up for its thirtieth season.

Mrs. James Craig Peacock, chairman of the Vacation Lodge committee, will introduce the speakers tonight. The guests will include: Majorie Anderson, Ann Golden, Maude Thompson, Irma Smith, May Richards, Elizabeth Raymond, Eva Catlin, Gertrude Powell, Marie Backus, Maude Steele, Annie Sawyer, Elizabeth Haney, Edith Christie, Julia Moore, Jessie Boehlert, Mrs. Sterling Hamlet, Margaret Konner, Marie Thurau, Mary Mack, Mrs. Peacock, Louise Wight and Miss Edith Young.

Mrs. Johnson Gives Luncheon

A small, informal luncheon was given yesterday by Mrs. Hallett Johnson at the 1925 F Street Club. Mrs. Johnson, whose husband remained in Sweden where he is counselor at the United States Legation, arrived in Washington a short while ago and is stopping at the Anchorage.

Arriving May 27 will be the two Johnson girls, Priscilla and Katherine, who will remain here until June 15 with their mother. The sisters have been in Boston, where they were studying at Miss Child's School. When they leave here Mrs. Johnson and her two daughters will open their summer home at Bar Harbor, Me.

gators, are not properly reflected on the books of the companies, the commission declared.

If this were the case, consolidated financial statements filed by the North American Co. based in part on data obtained from the Missouri companies would be incorrect. North American has been brought into the picture, it was explained, because of this possibility. Moreover, the commission intends to try to ascertain whether it knew about the transactions of its Missouri subsidiaries.

An effort will be made at the hearing to determine whether the Missouri companies violated the 1933 Securities Act, the 1934 Securities and Exchange Act, and the 1935 Utility Holding Company Act by falsifying financial statements and making contributions to influence elections.

Under the Holding Company Act, such contributions are a criminal offense. Bribery, although generally classed as a crime, is not covered by this particular statute. If the SEC finds that the Missouri companies were guilty of bribery, it may point to the disclosure as an example of the need for closing up the "loophole" in the statute.

Paper Made First Charges

The SEC inquiry was begun, strange to say, at the request of Louis H. Egan, former president of Union Electric, and Frank J. Boehm, former executive vice president, after the St. Louis Post-Dispatch had published a number of charges involving the company.

The officials, it is said, wanted the SEC to look into the charges made by the newspaper and clear up the whole matter.

Thereafter, the commission charged the company with making political contributions in violation of the holding company act and ordered a public hearing. The company brought an injunction suit to stop the hearing.

No Promises Made

Later it dropped the suit. J. F. Fogarty, president of North American, officials said, promised cooperation with the SEC if it would continue a private inquiry. He announced that Egan, Boehm and A. C. Laun, a vice president, had withdrawn from the operations of Union Electric.

The commission agreed, but with the understanding, officials said, that they were making no promises with regard to the results of the investigation.

As a result of testimony given under oath in the course of the private inquiry, the commission was responsible for perjury proceedings against Boehm, Laun and Frederick J. Martin, a company engineer.

Boehm will come up for trial in the United States District Court for the eastern Missouri district June 17, and for this reason it is unlikely that the SEC public hearing would start until afterward.

Roosevelt Urges House Pass Hatch Bill

drive and predicted it would swell the number of signers.

It was Representative Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, who took the floor of the House yesterday to criticize the "unprecedented action" of the Judiciary Committee in tabling the legislation by unsigned ballots.

Challenges Anderson

Twice Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, challenged Anderson's right to proceed. Hoffman said editorial remarks quoted by Anderson cast reflections on the Judiciary Committee. The chair ruled there was nothing objectionable in Anderson's remarks, and he was allowed to proceed.

"The purpose of this (pigeonholing) acting is apparent," Anderson told the House. "It was intended only to prevent, if possible, full consideration by this body of legislation which already has passed the Senate and has for its sole purpose the reestablishment of decency, common honesty and true democratic principles in political campaigns and political parties."

The Missouri Democrat said "a storm of protest and condemnation" had descended on the House for its Judiciary Committee's action.

"Can we sit supinely by and permit to pass unchallenged an action which has been characterized as unequaled in this country for its callous and brazen betrayal of public trust, for its utter disregard and frustration of the public will and for its violation of public confidence?" asked Anderson?

Says Public Is Aware

"The public is fully aware of the fact that the foes of this legislation are those who have created and fostered an extreme and reprehensible application of political patronage methods until it justly can be termed the loot and spoils system," he said.

Representative Murdock announced plans to move today to obtain reconsideration of the tabling action after Representative Dempsey challenged the accuracy of the secret vote. The vote was announced as 14 to 10 for tabling. Dempsey said 16 members of the committee have told him and others they voted against pigeon-holing.

A third effort by Dempsey to free the bill from the Judiciary Committee will be made in the Rules Committee tomorrow. Dempsey will ask the rules group to report a resolution ordering right-of-way for the legislation within 10 days.

clothing, read:

"I, Verlin Spencer, being of sound mind . . . this is my last will and testament and leave all of my property to my wife (Polly). This will will be null and void if she spends more than $200 for funeral expenses."

First reconstruction of the crime by Police Chief Frank Higgins was that Spencer, who recently had won honors on a pistol range as an expert marksman, had had disagreements with the School Board and faculty members and that the meeting in the main high school building today was called to act on his case.

Suddenly Spencer, who recently suffered a nervous breakdown, drew a .22-caliber automatic pistol and began firing.

Bush, Speer and Alman—the only ones in the board room besides Spencer—slumped to the floor dead, each shot once through the heart.

Dashing out of the building yelling "I'll get them all!" Spencer nearly stumbled over several school children leaving their classes.

Driving several blocks to the junior high school, Spencer backed Vanderlip into the manual training room and shot him through the heart with one bullet.

Spencer then ran past the cafeteria where he encountered Mrs. Sturgeon. Higgins said he shot her through each hand, then calmly reloaded his pistol and fired another bullet near her heart.

Miss Talbert also fell victim of Spencer's gun. She was wounded in the chest.

Hospital authorities said the condition of both women was serious.

Higgins said Mrs. Spencer had accompanied her husband to school today, fearful of his frame of mind, and that the shooting occurred shortly after she returned home. They have one son, Verlin, jr., 12.

Economic Reprisal On Mexico Urged

Exertion by the United States of "economic force" against Mexico in reprisal for the government's expropriation of American oil and other properties was urged yesterday by Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri.

Short denounced Mexico's oil expropriation as "piracy."

Dies Group Told Of Rendezvous by Smith, Bridges

The name of Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board, was brought into Dies Committee hearings yesterday by a witness who told of a midnight meeting in Baltimore in 1936 between Smith and Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader.

Smith, who has figured prominently in testimony of the special House Committee investigating the Labor Board, conferred with Bridges on the election of officers for a maritime union, said the witness, Peter J. Inness, jr.

Inness, a former official in the C. I. O. National Maritime Union, declared that after the conference Bridges stated: "I think we have arranged for the elections on the Atlantic Coast."

Japan's Source of Gold for Trade in U. S. Puzzles Officials in Capital

000 in gold to this country in 1939, and during the first quarter of 1940 has sent an additional $55,000,000 to buy American goods.

American officials, who long have predicted that Japan was reaching the bottom of its gold barrel, are frankly puzzled as to where the Japanese are getting the precious metal.

Secret "War Chest"

One explanation is that Japan long ago began hoarding gold in a secret "war chest" against any trouble with Russia and has been dipping into this fund to pay its war bill in China.

Japan's gold production amounts to only about $62,000,000 a year. The country has made feverish efforts recently to develop every possible gold-bearing property, especially on the Island of Formosa.

Japan's ability to obtain gold is considered here to be minor and decreasing. Shipping services to other nations can bring in very little foreign exchange, the experts declare, because most of Japan's maritime fleet is needed in far eastern waters.

Remittances from Japanese living in the United States and other foreign areas have declined greatly.

Favorable foreign exchange balances from trade with other countries have decreased steadily because of war conditions, especially since Germany's invasion of Denmark and Norway. Japan obtains no foreign exchange from its trade with China, Manchoukuo and other yen-blocked countries.

Japan's conquest of China was slowed to an extent that little new territory containing gold, silver or other valuable property has been taken in recent months.

The tourist business, which formerly brought a large amount of foreign exchange to Japan, has dropped almost to the vanishing point.

Japan needs raw materials both for normal industrial purposes and for war. This makes it imperative for the Japanese to continue purchases abroad.

In view of the predicted exhaustion of gold reserves, economists here are pondering whether the Japanese will be able to devise method of obtaining required raw barter transactions or some other materials.

D.C. Committee Delays Action On Benefit Bill

Unemployment Relief Act to Be Taken Up By Group Thursday

The House District Committee yesterday postponed a decision on the controversial amendments to the local unemployment compensation act until Thursday after more than an hour's discussion of labor protests in executive session.

Chairman Jennings Randolph explained that only eight members were present, and the committee agreed that a vote without a quorum would be unfair. He expressed the hope an agreement will be reached at the special meeting.

The committee voted to report a price-fixing bill for the liquor industry after receiving a written plea from Representative Paul Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, who is home recovering from injuries suffered in an automobile accident a few weeks ago.

Issue Idle for Weeks

The measure, which has been lying idle since early in the session, authorizes the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to pass upon sales agreements between wholesale concerns and distributers.

Shafer has explained it was designed to stop price-cutting practices in the industry. He also expressed the opinion that it would enable the ABC board to prohibit large neon signs before liquor stores.

The committee approved a bill to set up a code for the regulation of fire, marine and casualty insurance.

During a brief open session the committee approved bills to permit the admission of residents of the Virgin Islands to St. Elizabeth's Hospital and to give the Board of Education control of the conferring of degrees by junior colleges in Washington.

Eberharter Fights Bill

Representative Herman P. Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, led the attack on the latest McGehee bill to amend the unemployment compensation act.

Eberharter said he would be satisfied with the benefit provisions of the former McGehee bill, which allowed maximum payments of $20 a week for 20 weeks, although he sponsored a C. I. O. bill carrying more liberal provisions.

He characterized as "vicious" a clause in the latest McGehee bill limiting benefits to a third of the wages earned by an applicant in the base period.

Eberharter also offered amendments to allow extra benefit payments for dependents and to set up an advisory council to work with the Unemployment Compensation Board.

Dirksen Defends

Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, defended the proposed "compromise" bill in the executive session.

Spokesmen for the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. warned the District Committee their representatives will fight the McGehee bill when it gets to the House floor unless benefit provisions are liberalized.

A. J. Skinner Talks At Convention Here; Selinger Heads Group

Sidney Selinger, of Washington, was elected president of the Tri-State Jewelers Association in the closing session of its twenty-sixth annual meeting at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

Sidney Ross, of Baltimore, was chosen first vice president; John Minster, Elkton, Md., second vice president; Elwood Davis, Wilmington, secretary, and Millard S. Braun, Baltimore, treasurer.

The following were named to the board of directors: A. C. Mayer, of Washington; J. G. Engel, of Baltimore; George Keitz, of Wilmington, and Arthur Sundlun, of Washington, the retiring president.

Diamonds have lost some of their "glamour," and, therefore, some of "their relative sales appeal," Arnold J. Skinner, of the Marketing Research Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, told a session of the convention.

Per capita income, Skinner said, must pass the levels of the late twenties if jewelry store sales are to exceed the sales volumes of the 1920-30 period.

"There are indications that to the buying public, diamonds and other precious stones and fine silver have lost some of their symbolism, their sentiment, their glamour, or to state it in a more prosaic manner, they have lost some of their relative sales appeal," Skinner declared.

Five hundred association members and their wives closed the convention with a dance at the Mayflower last night.

Sanitary Code As Pan American Model Is Studied

Preparation of a sanitary code as a model for health departments of the American republics was considered yesterday at a session of the fourth Pan American Health Conference at the Pan American Union.

Gregorio Marquez, legal adviser of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau, declared such a code would aid in the drafting of public health laws by various countries. A draft will be presented at the sanitary conference in Rio de Janeiro in 1942.

Regulations covering air traffic, tuberculosis and the bottling of beverages were among the newer developments of Mexican public health law described by Dr. Jose Siurob. The new law, he said, provides penalties for the transmission of venereal diseases.

Oehmann Asks Builders Heed Safety Rules

Office Made 70,000 Inspections in 1939, Building Congress Told

A plea for greater cooperation from local builders in following safety specifications of the District building code was made yesterday by Col. John Oehmann, building inspector, at a luncheon meeting of the Washington Building Congress in the National Press Club.

Citing the recent O street fire in which three lives were lost, Oehmann said his office was not informed of certain structural changes in the apartment house and the unauthorized work was not discovered until after the blaze.

Because of inadequate personnel in his office, Oehmann said it was a difficult task to keep abreast of all construction jobs with frequent inspections. In spite of rapid strides in Washington building during the last ten years, he said, his staff of 12 building inspectors has remained the same.

He added, however, that he has four steel, nine elevator, and three fire escape inspectors.

In 1939, Oehmann said, his office conducted 70,000 building inspections and the average time for each job was 14 minutes.

"I defy anyone to take, for instance, this Press Building and complete an inspection in 14 minutes—yet that's what we're expected to do," he said.

If builders would adhere more rigidly to the regulations, Oehmann declared, it would facilitate his work. On several occasions, he said, it has been found that building contractors fail to "stick to the original plans submitted to my office."

The board of governors of the congress adopted a resolution calling for sufficient appropriations to provide adequate inspection service; to enforce existing regulations and for legislation prohibiting acceptance of building applications where public safety is involved unless plans have been prepared by registered architects and engineers.

Four Injured in Falls

Four persons were injured in falls here yesterday, one by treading on a banana peel.

Victim of the banana was Ernest Moffatt, 18, of 822 G street southeast, who fractured his left arm. Milton Mothershead, 30, of 115 E street northwest, suffered a fractured ankle when he fell on a stairway while delivering ice.

Wars on Unmuzzled Dogs

Poundmaster Frank B. Marks reported last night that the sole wagon belonging to the pound traveled more than 60 miles, and picked up 25 dogs in the first day of a drive to keep dogs without muzzles off the streets.

Marks said the people were "cooperating very well." Between 50 to 60 dogs now held will be kept 48 hours before being destroyed. The best dog captured today, which can be had for the price of a license, is a small, black Scotch terrier.

Two Citizens' Bodies Ask Rapid Transit

Metropolis View And Kenilworth Support Proposal For D. C. System

Proposals to set up a rapid transit system from the District lines to the downtown area last night won support of two citizens organizations.

Traffic, taxes and bus service were also discussed at meetings last night.

Dupont Circle

L. M. Leisenring was elected president of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association at the organization's annual meeting yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel. Leisenring, an architect, lives at 1777 Church street northwest. He succeeds Woodson P. Houghton, 1331 Eighteenth street northwest.

Other officers elected yesterday were Dr. Harry A. Garfield, 1529 New Hampshire avenue northwest, first vice president; Harral Mulliken, 2019 Q street northwest, second vice president; Rowland S. Marshall, 1316 New Hampshire avenue northwest, secretary, and W. Herbert Gill, 1519 Twentieth street northwest, treasurer.

After the meeting the executive committee met to name two members to succeed Leisenring and Mulliken. They chose Houghton and Admiral William L. Rodgers.

The association adopted a resolution requesting the District Commissioners to amend the regulations covering sale and manufacture of alcoholic beverages. This amendment would require notification of property owners within 150 feet radius of the proposed site of a place for sale or manufacture of beverages 20 days before hearing on a license.

Another resolution indorsed the demand of the First Ward Neighborhood Council for establishment of a playground for white children at Twenty-fourth and P streets.

Metropolis View

Establishment of shuttle trains from Takoma Park and Chillum Manor to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing via Union Station was asked last night by the Metropolis View Citizens Association.

The civic group heard Alfred D. Calvert, president of the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations explain his plan for providing more rapid transit facilities from the area and indorsed the program.

Forest Hills

Despite assurances from the owner that he has no intention of converting the Chevy Chase Ice Palace into a boxing and wrestling arena, the Forest Hills Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution opposing the change.

Leslie B. Wright was reelected president. Others chosen were Charles A. Burmeister, vice president; Franklin T. Baldwin, reelected secretary, and J. N. McCollum, reelected treasurer. Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations reelected were L. A. Carruthers and J. Sanders.

Manor Park

Daniel Lloyd was reelected president of the Manor Park Citizens Association last night at its meeting at Whittier School.

Mrs. Arthur Kriemelmeyer was named second vice president; George R. Kieferle, reelected recording secretary; John H. Stephenson, corresponding secretary, and T. W. Buckley was reelected treasurer.

A resolution for an increase in the tax on beer was introduced at the meeting and was referred to the tax committee of the association.

Progressive of Georgetown

A protest against changing the name of Jefferson street in Georgetown to Thirtieth place was voted last night by the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown.

Evidence was presented by the meeting that Thomas Jefferson lived on the street while Secretary of State and that it was named for him before Washington was founded. The District Commissioners plan the change of the name because three streets now bear this designation.

Kenilworth

Kenilworth Citizens Association last night supported the Northeast Conference's indorsement of a plan to establish a rapid transit belt line in the District, with Fourteenth and D streets southwest as the focal point. Approval of the proposal followed a talk by A. D. Calvert, president of Lincoln Park Citizens Association.

Congress Hts. Progressive

Protest against any increase in real estate taxes in the District was made last night by Congress Heights Progressive Association, which adopted a resolution urging that appropriations be kept within anticipated revenues.

Hospital Unit Dedication To Be Today

Mrs. Roosevelt to Speak At D. C. Training School In Special Ceremony

The new hospital unit of the District Training School at Laurel, Md., will be dedicated at 1:30 p. m. today with special exercises at which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will speak.

The ceremonies are sponsored by the Monday Evening Club in cooperation with the Board of Public Welfare. The spacious hospital building is a step toward remedying overcrowded conditions at the school, an institution for the feebleminded. More than 600 children and adults are housed there.

The program will be in charge of Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare. Other speakers will include Commissioner J. Russell Young and Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital. Members of the House and Senate District committees also have been invited to attend.

The new structure will house offices of the institution as well as provide long-needed facilities for segregating patients.

Arrangements were made by Mrs. Walter S. Ufford, Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Everett, Dr. and Mrs. James Lewald and Mrs. R. Thomas West.

District's Crime Bill for the Day: $68 Total Loot

Bandits and burglars collected $68 loot in a holdup, a pocketbook snatching and two housebreakings here yesterday.

Two young boys, armed with a pistol, got two milk drinks and $10 when they held up Esther Miller, of 514 Tenth street northeast, at an ice cream store in the 1000 block of Fourth street northeast.

Summer Concerts Pledged Anonymously If Goal Is Attained

Washington will have its summer symphony concerts at the Watergate this year, if the campaign for $107,000 for the regular season succeeds, 200 cheering workers were assured at a campaign-opening tea at the Carlton Hotel yesterday.

A. F. E. Horn, general campaign chairman, told the men and women whose efforts in the next 10 days will determine whether Washington is to have a National Symphony Orchestra, that an "anonymous donor" has agreed to underwrite the summer concerts if they succeed.

Six weeks of 12 summer concerts last year cost $5,000. While officials emphasized that no definite plans for the Watergate season could be made until the future of the orchestra was ascertained, the sustaining fund would be approximately the same.

Solicitations Exceed Last Year's

The workers—about 700 have enlisted for the campaign—were given another occasion for cheering when Fred G. Spaulding, drive director, announced that advance solicitations had brought in $8,262 as against $6,163 by the same means last year.

The money was collected, Spaulding said, from 535 subscribers to previous campaigns.

L. Corrin Strong, president of the board of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, told the workers he thought they had "a lot of sporting blood to come out at this late date." He referred to the cause for delay in the symphony's tenth annual sustaining fund drive—the wage dispute with union musicians.

Pay Depends on Campaign

He congratulated both the union and association members on the compromise eventually worked out. "The men through their union got something, and they gave something," Strong declared. He told the workers that their principal gain was a guarantee for two years of an 80-piece symphony "without losing any of its high artistic standards."

He urged workers to remember that under the sliding scale arrangement of the union agreement the earnings of musicians depend upon the amount raised by the campaign.

Horn declared that the symphony is "one of the few things left that still operates on a cash basis."

The drive's first report luncheon will be Thursday.

Union Veterans' Sons Open Meeting Today

The fifty-fourth annual encampment of the Department of Maryland, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, and auxiliaries, will open today at the Continental Hotel and continue through Wednesday.

The Maryland department embraces Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia. Gen. Albert L. Cox, of the District National Guard, will speak at the annual luncheon Wednesday.

Education Group Meets Saturday

Washington educational leaders will join in a forum on vocational and educational guidance at Dennison Vocational School, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest at 10 a. m. Saturday.

The program is sponsored by the District Vocational Association, of which Theodore G. Parkman is president.

Police Adjust 71 Parking Violations

4 Plead Diplomatic Immunity; Legislators Intervene for Three

Four persons pleaded diplomatic immunity, and Congressmen intervened to cancel three other tickets among 71 parking violations adjusted last week, according to a list made public yesterday by police.

There were 59 warnings and 12 outright cancellations of tickets as the adjustments diminished in comparison with the previous week's total of 87 adjustments.

Something a bit out of the ordinary were two notations that officers had made mistakes in tagging.

A woman was excused with a warning when she pleaded that she had stopped only momentarily when she disobeyed an official parking sign while she inspected her broken eye glasses.

William Snowberger, 2719 Thirteenth street northwest, got off with a warning, thanks to the request of Representative Frank C. Osmers (Republican), of New Jersey. Representative Adolph J. Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, performed a similar favor for William J. Thomas, of 652 E street northeast; while Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, took care of a warning for Melvin L. Stevens, of 327 East Capitol street.

Eight persons claimed their cars had been pushed, four that their cars had been disabled, three that they were on official government business, and four doctors explained they were on emergency calls.

A new one was pulled by Harry E. Burns, 1627 West Virginia avenue northeast. Burns blamed it all on some sandwiches. He said he parked unlawfully only because he stopped to eat and then fell asleep. He had a previous good record.

Escaping through the plea of diplomatic immunity were Herman Holcombe, Brazilian Embassy; Hernst A. Hepp, German Embassy; Manuel de J. Sainz, Cuban Embassy, and Joe R. Candrado, listed as a butler at the Mexican Embassy.

Y. M. C. A. Spring Festival

A spring festival will be presented by the girls' auxiliary of the boys department of the YMCA tonight Tuesday in the Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H street northwest, at 8 o'clock.

The program, directed by Mrs. Jack Jones, Mrs. T. Cardella and Mrs. F. M. Bragg, includes tap dancing, stunts and a play entitled "The Princess Who Could Not Be Silenced."

Bar Aide Asks FBI to Curb Crime Here

Dr. Colvin Makes Suggestion Before Federal Association; Rice Elected Head

Federal Bureau of Investigation intervention as a means of curbing crime in the District was suggested last night to the Federal Bar Association by Dr. H. Milton Colvin, chairman of its committee on criminal law and procedure.

Dr. Colvin, of the United States Housing Authority, made it clear that while the committee had studied his proposal, it had been unable to agree on it, and therefore had failed to formulate a recommendation.

Dr. Colvin pointed out that inasmuch as the city is a Federal jurisdiction, the FBI might be utilized as a law enforcement agency here.

Rice Named President

The association, at its annual meeting and dinner in the National Press Club, elected Heber H. Rice, senior attorney for the Home Owners Loan Corporation, president, to succeed William N. Morell, of the Veterans' Administration.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman W. Arnold was elected first vice president. Other new officers are William E. Reese, General Accounting Office, second vice president; Marguerite Rawalt, Internal Revenue, third vice president; Bernard F. Burdick, editor of the Federal Bar Journal and fourth vice president; David S. Davison, Civil Service Commission, secretary; Wilbur N. Baughman, Federal Trade Commission, financial secretary; Edward R. Hicks, Securities and Exchange Commission, treasurer, and William R. Vallance, State Department, delegate to the American Bar Association.

The association approved a report of its committee on public utilities recommending a shift of emphasis in rate making from "the private property theory toward a public policy or welfare concept."

Walter-Logan Bill Opposed

The committee chairman, John W. Scott, read a report which said prevailing rate-making procedure "neglects the fact that in our national economy, the utilization is just as important as the right to a fair return upon the money invested in utility property."

In adopting a report of another committee, the association recorded its opposition to further Congressional action on the Walter-Logan bill to reform administrative procedure of the Federal Government until the Justice Department has completed its study.

The report, submitted by J. Fred Johnson, jr., of the Federal Communications Commission, recalled that the organization's executive council already has disapproved a similar bill.

Reports also were read by Wilbur C. Pickett, chairman, civil service committee, and George Barse, chairman, legislation committee.

Traffic Blocked As Firemen Fight Earle Bldg. Blaze

Traffic was blocked for an hour last night at Thirteenth and E streets northwest while firemen battled a blaze in a sixth-floor storeroom at the Earle Building.

The fire, which is believed to have started spontaneously, destroyed chairs, paper supplies and cleaning apparatus valued at $200. Smoke filled the sixth-floor corridors, but all offices were empty at the time, including that of the Paul V. McNutt for President headquarters a few doors away.

The fire was discovered by J. A. Johnson, of 627 Newton place northwest, the elevator operator. He pulled the box across the street, and opened locked doors for firemen.

Occupants of offices on nearby floors rushed to the scene, but the theater audience six floors below was unaware of the excitement.

Critics Circle Abandons Rules to Pick a Winner

Five Ballots Give Saroyan Top Honors; Producer-Director Shows Sons the Capital; This, That and the Other About the Theater

SO THE NEW YORK DRAMA CRITICS CIRCLE bestowed their award upon William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life" as the best American play of the season, with Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night" the runner-up.

BELL

It seems to this corner that the Critics Circle either ought to change its rules or its collective mind. Unable to agree upon a winner last year, no award at all was made to any play. This year, to arrive at a decision, it became necessary to abandon the three-quarters vote rule and decide a winner on a majority vote basis. The balloting of the 18 critics eligible to vote finally wound up like this: "The Time of Your Life," 11; "There Shall Be No Night," 4; Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo, 2, and for "The Man Who Came to Dinner," 1.

Five ballots were taken, during which there was considerable fluctuation in the ratings. Saroyan's play started high on the first ballot, with 10 votes, Sherwood's garnered four and "Key Largo" two. The second time around "The Time of Your Life" dropped one and "There Shall Be No Night" picked up two. On the fourth vote Saroyan picked up his original support and went back to 10 votes, "There Shall Be No Night" dropped to five and "Key Largo retained its original two. It was on the fifth ballot that "The Time of Your Life" showed its full strength, with 11 markers on the slips, four for "There Shall Be No Night" and the same old two for "Key Largo."

It was at this point that a three-quarters vote of the "Death Watch" amended its rules and tapped Mr. Saroyan on the shoulder with the flat of its blade and gave him the benefit of the majority expression.

A bulletin from our old friend "Bill" Fields, of the Playwrights' Company, sheds some further light on the reception "There Shall Be No Night" is being accorded at the Alvin Theater on Broadway. It practically duplicates that accorded the Lunts' new vehicle during its week's stay at the National, prior to the New York engagement. During its first full week in Manhattan, the play grossed $23,590, a sum that represents absolute capacity at all eight performances, with 560 standees during the seven days. Tickets are on sale through July 1 and the advance sale, as of May 4, was in excess of $60,000.

That was a pleasant luncheon Manager Eddie Fontaine, of Paramount, and Loew's Ray Bell tossed for the press in honor of Mark Sandrich, Paramount producer-director, at Harvey's yesterday. Mr. Sandrich is the man who made so many of the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers pictures on the RKO-Radio lot, before affiliating with Paramount. He also cracked the whip on Jack Benny's "Man About Town" and the same star's forthcoming "Buck Benny Rides Again." He is a highly intelligent and genial fellow and unique among Hollywood's producers-directors. What I mean is that he wanted to talk about everything else but "plugs" for "Buck Benny Rides Again," coming in due course to the screen at Loew's Palace. If that isn't unique, you tell one.

The real reason for the visit of Mr. and Mrs. Sandrich to Washington at this time is to show their two sons—aged 8 and 12—the National Capital and what makes it tick. Immediately following the luncheon, they were going to Mount Vernon to give the boys a closer insight into the illustrious career of the Father of His Country. Other things the lads are especially interested in are Congress in session and J. Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Dots and Dashes

This week's engagement of "Louisiana Purchase," closes the 1939-40 season at the National Theater, after almost 30 weeks of bookings . . . A record only a handful of cities, outside of New York and Chicago, are able to boast . . . By May 23, Eddie Fontaine and a group of his local Paramount henchmen will be in Hollywood for the annual sales convention of his company . . . The Warner Brothers had planned to hold their annual convention in this city, until they learned that the dates coincided with hearing on the highly controversial Neely bill. . . . Looked so much like lobbying that now there is a doubt. . . . There hasn't been an annual convention of a major producing company in Washington since Paramount's about this time in 1928 . . . Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Laskey, the late John Monk Saunders, Charles "Buddy" Rogers and George Palmer Putnam, who later married Amelia Earhart, were among the "big shots" at that conclave. They gave the Capital its first glimpse of "Wings" as the piece de resistance of the goings-on, following a banquet at the Carlton at which Presidential candidate Herbert Hoover and Otto Kahn were the principal speakers . . . Speaking of season ends—as we were somewhere back there—the Howard hangs up the shutters until next fall this Thursday night.

No-Rest-for-the-Weary Note

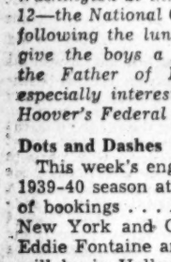
And then will come along the Roadside, Cross Roads and probably the Olney to fill in the chinks.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 6.

Walter Pitkin wrote "Life Begins at Forty," but Gertrude W. Hoffman, mother of three children, grandmother of four, takes issue with him. She's written a story for SEP called "Crashing Hollywood at Sixty." Her husband was Ralph Hoffman, director of Museum of Natural History at Santa Barbara, where she lived happily until her husband's tragic death. Then she came to Hollywood and made herself useful. Since 1932 she's played 38 parts in pictures. Now doing "Foreign Correspondent"—is a passenger on a clipper ship which goes down, and Walter Wanger asked her if she'd be scared—because she'll be totally submerged. "No," replied Grandma, "there'll be somebody handy to pull me out, won't there?"



HOPPER

Reason you only hear "God Bless America" sung by Kate Smith is that Irving Berlin gave exclusive singing rights to her. There's talk, however, of that song being established as our national anthem, which might help a lot. We really could sing that one. But it takes a trained voice to reach "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Winnie Sheehan is talking of taking his Lipizan horses and Florian, the star of the picture by the same name, to the World's Fair.

Frank Nugent, ace critic on the New York Times, has been handed as his first assignment by Mr. Zanuck, "Lucky Baldwin"—an epic of California.

Delighted that David Selznick has sponsored the Yale Film Society—a new group of university students interested in our business. David will see they get the present and old films, so they can study past and present technique.

Virginia Bruce, while making "The Sentence," got an offer of marriage from a high-ranking East Indian Moslem named Ranja Pindi: "Although I have three native wives," he wrote, "nothing would make me happier than to have you for my fourth. You would be apart from the whims of my others. I want a blond, fair-skinned woman for a wife. And I promise you'll be the last one . . . If you won't marry me, please satisfy me with a picture."

Victor Fleming will probably be Clark Gable's next director for the "Soapy Smith" story. Speaking of Clark, he has lots to learn about farming. The devil grass at his ranch was doing better than blue grass, so he had it sprayed—and the poison killed off 20 turkeys!

Actress-Dancer in New Musical

last seen locally in "I Married an Angel," who costars with William Gaxton, Victor Moore and Irene Bordoni in "Louisiana Purchase," the new musical satire—with book by Morrie Ryskind and music and lyrics by Irving Berlin—which opened in the National Theater last night. Produced by B. G. DeSylva, an old tunes-and-words man himself.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

Wendell Willkie, the dark horse in the Republican sweepstakes, was interviewed by Eckert Goodman of Town and Country . . . "Mr. Willkie," the interviewer began, "one of my friends insisted that I ask you this question: How long does a Dark Horse remain dark?" . . . Willkie laughed and answered: "Until somebody whitewashes him—or lightens him us."

THURSDAY EVENING the Picture Pioneers—a club whose members were engaged in the moving picture industry 25 years ago—held its second annual dinner . . . Because some of the guests had cancelled their plans to see the Kentucky Derby in order to be present at this dinner, the sponsors decided to have their own Kentucky Derby—there, in the banquet hall. Three horses were brought into the Waldorf, up the freight elevator, and onto a treadmill which had been erected . . . With real jockeys on their backs, the horses ran 1¼ miles on that treadmill, then rested an hour and raced a second time . . . More than $1,000 was wagered among the guests.

C. B. S. HAS AGREED to give the Communist Party 15 minutes of radio time for the Red convention. Earl Browder and James W. Ford, who will be nominated, will make acceptance speeches . . . The Cotton Club's spring revue held its premiere Friday to one of the largest crowds in the history of that institution. It's the No. 1 show in New York's night life . . . Harry Carey will remain in New York until the fall. He'll do "Ah, Wilderness" in summer stock, and is dramatizing a book for Broadway production . . . When the ILGWU convenes shortly it will propose continuation of the New Deal, a Third term and oppose changes in the Wagner Act.

WILLIAM SAROYAN left for San Francisco, saddened by the reviews accorded "Love's Old Sweet Song"—and not even the Critics Circle Prize for "The Time of Your Life" compensated for that disappointment . . . The proprietor of the Miami Theater on Sixth avenue—where old silent films are shown—was surprised this week by a rush of business. The film now being shown there is "Sins of Satan," a rush of business. The film now being shown there is "Sins of Satan," starring James O'Neill. Almost every member of Equity is seeing that movie, because its star, O'Neill, now works as an Equity representative.

THERE WILL BE one aftermath of the Lepke case—a shakeup in the Narcotics Bureau . . . Before Jim Tully left New York a few days ago he held reunion with some men who had been hoboes when he was one "Jim is very self-conscious," one of them apologized, "because he's never been to jail.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA suspects a former employe as the author of the anti-Fiorello article which was featured in "Friday," the new magazine . . . Lois Elliman is dieting hurriedly, before her engagement begins at El Morocco . . . The platform of the American Labor Party will be more Leftist than the New Deal program. Its demands on Congress will make the President appear to be a centrist . . . Jessie Royce Landis, who has the leading role in "Love's Old Sweet Song"— in which Alan Hewitt recites the names of all the editors and assistant editors of Time magazine— is the wife of Rex Smith, editor of News-Week . . . Tom Dewey will invade Kentucky Saturday.

AT FEFE'S MONTE Carlo James Cannon joined a table at which sat Mary Anita Loos . . . "You've got a good job," Cannon kidded, "and you'll inherit a lot of money—so what do you say? We'll get married and I'll quit working" . . . "Shame on you," Miss Loos told him, "thinking of living off a woman. Do you realize what might happen to you 10 years from now—if you live off a woman?" . . . "Yes," replied Cannon. "I might wind up as head of a union."

New Musical At National Is Headed for Hit

'Louisiana Purchase' Is Tuneful, Funny And Stunningly Staged

By Nelson B. Bell

"LOUISIANA PURCHASE." B. G. DeSylva presents the new musical satire, in two acts and 15 scenes with book by Morrie Ryskind (based on a story by Mr. DeSylva) and music and lyrics by Irving Berlin. Staged by Edgar McGregor; ballets by George Ballanchine; dances by Carl Randall. Costumes and settings by Tom Lee. At the National Theater.

"Louisiana Purchase," the new B. G. DeSylva production, with "book" by Morrie Ryskind—based on a story by Mr. DeSylva—and music and lyrics by Irving Berlin, revealed all of the earmarks and eyemarks of an eventual hit to a capacity audience in the National Theater last night.

Still in its formative stage—as all musical comedies are at this early period in their development—the 2 acts and 15 scenes lack balance as between "plot" and music and dancing, with the balance at present tipped heavily on the side of the melodies, ballets and modern taps. There are times in the first act when the satirical narrative of shady politics and senatorial investigations is pretty thoroughly lost from view. The interrupted continuity of story, however, is not a matter of great seriousness, since it makes way for an added number of Irving Berlin's lilting tunes and tricky lyrics and the espirited ballets and dances contrived by George Ballanchine and Carl Randall. The second act possesses greater cohesiveness. It also sacrifices something of its satirical pungency to the nonsensical hilarity of sheer farce.

Satire's Targets Obvious

There is, of course, no possibility of mistaking the recent events to which "Louisiana Purchase" pertains, or the characters at which it aims its good-natured raillery. It has nothing to do with a vast real estate deal between the United States and France. But it does have a great deal to do with the promotion of a famous university and the building of a sky-scraping Statehouse—and the people concerned therein.

These people are impersonated by a group of prime favorites, led by William Gaxton, Victor Moore, Vera Zorina and Irene Bordoni, rather more than ably assisted by Robert Pitkin, Ray Mayer, Ralph Riggs, Edward H. Robins and numerous others. The singing is well looked to by the stars, plus most of those mentioned and April Ames and Carol Bruce, two extremely personable and talented young women—who would have to be to hold their own with such a gorgeous ensemble of youthful Venuses and lusty Adonises.

Tops in Music and Dancing

Zorina is incomparable in her ballets and completely competent as an ingenious actress. Irene Bordoni and the Messrs. Gaxton and Moore fully uphold the high reputations they have enjoyed through years of this sort of thing. Nick Long, jr., April Ames and Nicodemus, cast in a minor comedy role, add to the terpsichorean variety of an evening filled with music, laughter and eye-filling beauty. The Berlin score never lets the extravagantly handsome production down and the settings and costumes are the last word—if there is such a thing—in picturesqueness and good taste.

Last night's was the earliest curtain the work has had since opening in New Haven last Thursday night, but it was still a bit late—11:30 p. m. By the time "Louisiana Purchase" reaches New York, after two more weeks in Philadelphia, it should have crept up close to "Leave It to Me" as an ideal Gaxton-Moore vehicle. A rough guess would be that it is virtually "in," even as it stands at present.

'At Mrs. Beam's' Is a Gay, Laughable Civic Production

By Richard L. Coe

It's a happy thought for our boarding-house town which the Civic Theater is offering in "At Mrs. Beam's" and a politely hilarious one. With Rachel Sewall being superbly funny as a grimly garrulous Defender of Respectability, the C. K. Munro play opened its week's run last night at the Wardman Park Theater.

For every character "At Mrs. Beam's" there must be thousands of counterparts in the Capital, which so abounds in landladies and their paying guests. None, perhaps, is so typical or so funny as Rachel Sewall's chattering Miss Shoe, who spins a bloody yarn about one of her fellow guests being the Bluebeard of France who currently is dispatching his mistresses with a bloody cleaver, packing the remains in trunks.

There is definitely mystifying reason upon which Miss Shoe may base her legend. The gentleman in question is an indirect sort of chap about his affairs. He has a chaotic roommate, a sleek, dark-haired wench who is playing some strange game with him. She'll play games with any man who heaves in sight and her "husband" is not above offering secretarial posts free-handed himself. The other boarders follow Miss Shoe's footsteps in attempting to clear up the shady relationship.

But what really makes "At Mrs. Beam's" such swell amusement is the Civic's excellently coordinated production. Miss Sewall, as the constant windbag, is the triumph of the evening, to be sure, but she is not alone in her constantly witty caricature. William Mogerman, as a dazed and monosyllabic Cockney in the midst of the confusion, is a joy simply to contemplate. Sarah Meigs as an astonished recipient of Bluebeard's attentions underplays gorgeously and Anne Ives is fine as the bridge-conscious Mrs. Bebb.

Lansing Hall makes an amazingly complete shift into loose Laura of the black hair, long eyelashes and slinky gowns. She plays the role created by Lynn Fontanne 15 years ago and, with Morris Arkin, in Mr. Lunt's role of Bluebeard, stages a fight that brings to mind that memorable one in "Private Lives." Mr. Arkin is properly sinister and aloof about the destruction he is creating. Dorothy White, Paul Sears, Betty Leaf, Lois Alexander and Frank Cronin complete the well-cast boarders.

Day Tuttle's direction rightly emphasizes the humor of the situations and William M. Girvan's two rollicking settings are bitterly complete to the ultimate potted palm. All in all, a gayly enjoyable relaxation.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Enough of this beating around the bush. Let's get to the bottom of the situation in the American League. How does it all strike Jack Doyle? Who is Jack Doyle? Don't be silly. He's the gent who knows what is transpiring and weighs it in relation to major league pennants and things. He's America's No. 1 betting commissioner.

POVICH

Deducing that Mr Doyle, despite his Broadway address, was no farther distant than the nearest telephone, this department put in a long-distance call. What did Doyle think about the Yankees' slump? Has he changed the 7-to-20 odds he quoted on the Yanks at the start of the season? How about the chances of the Indians and the Red Sox to take it all? Are the fifth-place Yankees false favorites?

"Son," said Mr. Doyle, "there's nothing the matter with the Yankees that Joe DiMaggio's return to the line-up can't cure. But I don't like the way they started out. Yes, I'm changing my odds against the Yanks. Tomorrow morning they're going to be 1-to-2 shots, not 7 to 20. But that sounds like I still like 'em, doesn't it?"

The Yanks are still the solid team in the league?

"That's what I mean. They have everything the other clubs don't. Pitching, hitting and fielding. They're off to a bad start, but it shouldn't be alarming. A year ago, or it might have been two years ago, the A's were leading the league at this stage. It doesn't mean much. They haven't finished the first 10 per cent of the playing season."

But the Yankees aren't playing good ball. Left-handed pitching is beating 'em to death.

"I know that, and so does Joe McCarthy. But that is on account of DiMaggio being out of there. The Yankees always needed a pacesetter. For years they had Ruth and then Gehrig. Lately it has been DiMaggio. They need him. If he should stay out for another month, I wouldn't like the Yankees to win the pennant either."

"They're playing bad ball. They're tight and panicky. The greatest infield in baseball is playing bad ball. Joe Gordon, the best second baseman I ever saw in the 50 years I've followed the game, is playing like a sandlotter. He's tight and worried. It has affected his batting. On Sunday I saw him hit at bad balls, something he never did before. The slump has the whole team pressing and that's bad. They need DiMaggio to shake them out of it."

Un-huh.

"The Tigers beat the Yanks with McKain the other day. He's been around the league longer than Clark Griffith. But any kind of a left-hander can beat 'em these days. It's funny, too. Fellows like Dickey and Keller always could hit left-handers, but not right now. They need that big Italian in there to give 'em some moral support."

And as for the Red Sox?

"I am giving you the Red Sox, and the Indians and the Tigers. Boston has the power and no pitching. It's a shame. The Indians have pitching, and not much power. I don't think they can do it. Detroit has power, fair kind of pitching and the worst infield you ever saw. The Yankees are still 1-to-2 in my book."

Suppose DiMaggio were out for another month?

"Now, that's different. The Yanks might not be able to stand it. They're too left-handed without him. I'd have to give the Red Sox a nice chance to beat 'em out. I still don't believe Boston could do it, y'understand, but they'd have that chance. The Yanks have too many good ball players to blow the pennant. With that infield behind us, you or I could pitch for the Yanks and win ball games."

There is some kind of a club called Brooklyn that's leading the National League, Mr. Doyle? How's about it.

"Do you think those Brooklyns are fooling me? I knew they had a chance when I put 'em at 6 to 1 in my book last month. They've come down. I've got 'em at 2½ to 1 now, and they can take it all. I'm not sure they're any flash in the pan. The whole setup in that league has changed."

Dodgers Win, 6-2, as Cards Hit Cellar

Curt Davis Beaten; Luke Hamlin Wins Second of Season

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 6.—Those indefatigable Brooklyn Dodgers trounced the Cardinals, 6 to 2, today for their eleventh victory in 12 starts and shoved St. Louis into a three-way tie for last place in the National League.

In winning, the Dodgers demonstrated again their ability to come from behind, because the Cards counted both their runs in the first inning and clung doggedly to the lead until the fifth.

But the Dodgers were not to be denied. They threatened real trouble as early as the second inning, when Cookie Lavagetto opened with a double and Dolph Camilli immediately singled him home. However, Curt Davis was able to snuff out that spark and preserved his equilibrium until the fifth. Then Roy Cullenbine led off with a single and moved to third on two infield hits. He scored on a double by Charley Gilbert, who in turn came in on a two-bagger by Pete Coscarart.

Camilli put the game in the icebox in the sixth with a home run, his third of the season, after Babe Phelps had singled.

Manager Ray Blades, of the Cardinals, criticized often this spring for his frequent changes of pitchers, allowed Davis to continue on the mound until Brooklyn nicked him for the final run in the eighth on successive singles by Coscarart, Jim Ripple and Lavagetto—with none out.

Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin, a 20-game winner for Brooklyn last season, kept nine hits scattered in winning his second decision of the spring. The Cards got to him in the first on Stu Martin's single, a triple by Country Slaughter and a fly by Joe Medwick, but after that he stayed out of trouble.

Both teams altered line-ups, Left-fielder Joe Vosmik, of the Dodgers, and Shortstop Martin Marion, of the Cards, being out of action as a result of a collision in yesterday's game.

Battle Jack Smashes Jennings 'Cap Mark

Martin's Horse Runs Six Furlongs in 1:11 2-5, One of Fastest Times Ever Posted; Speed to Spare 2d, ½ Length Back; Slow Motion 3d

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 6.—A new record for the $5,000 added Jennings Handicap, in other years won by some of the country's best sprinters, was registered today by J. W. Y. Martin's Battle Jack. The son of John P. Grier and Unfurled forged to the wire a half length in advance of the Circle M Ranch's Speed to Spare in time of 1:11 2-5, three-fifths of a second under the track record for 6 furlongs shared by Mainmast and Con Amore.

The pace was one of the fastest ever set over this or any other track. Speed to Spare, with Slow Motion, a stablemate of the winner, lapped on the outside, was clocked for the opening half mile in :45 4-5, one-fifth of a second under the world record credited to Double Call at Tropical Park last winter. However, the effort will not go in the record books.

Speed to Spare, accompanied by Honey Cloud, winner of two $5,000 races this spring, set the pace. Leaving the backstretch, Speed to Spare drew out, but only momentarily, for Slow Motion, with a brilliant move, came up to battle for the lead. Entering the stretch, Speed to Spare bore out and carried Slow Motion with him. Battle Jack, always close up, saved ground at the turn and then drove on to take the winner's portion of the pot.

Jockey Lucas Dupps rode Battle Jack in fine fashion.

Bosox Beat Indians, 8-5, Regain Lead

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 6.—Boston's Red Sox put on a six-run barrage in the fourth inning today to score an 8-5 triumph over the Cleveland Indians and climb back into leadership of the American League.

Starting Pitcher Willis Hudlin, Jack Humphries and Ken Jungles were the victims of the outburst in which Capt. Jimmy Foxx opened the hostilities with a lofty homer into the center field bleachers and closed the session with a long fly to the outfield.

Terps Defeat Colonials, 9-3; Duvall Stars

Drives in Two Runs In Sixth to Put His Mates on Victory Path

By Jack Munhall

Furnishing an unpleasant denouement to a bit of George Washington strategy, Sophomore Pinch-hitter Mearle Duvall yesterday singled home two runs in the sixth inning to wipe out a 3-2 deficit and lead the University of Maryland nine to a 9-3 victory over the Colonials in a well-played game at College Park.

There was one out and runners on second and third when G. W. Pitcher Frank McGinnis was ordered to intentionally pass Hugh Keller, the Terps' slugging leftfielder, and bring to the plate the lighter-hitting Newton Cox. With the fourth wide pitch Keller trotted to first to complete the cramming of the bases, but instead of facing Cox McGinnis found himself confronted with Duvall, the Baltimore kid who is considered one of the greatest natural athletes ever to enroll at College Park.

Duvall, a lean, lithe youngster who was outstanding in Maryland football and basketball last winter, wasted little time in proving the unsoundness of George Washington's strategy. On the second pitch he lined a hit over second base, scoring Dick McHale and Adam Bengoechea, who were on by virtue of consecutive singles to left. Duvall took second on the throw to the plate.

Once in front, at 4-3, the Terrapins really went to work on the 6-foot-3-inch McGinnis, who had held them to four hits in the first five innings, and pushed over an additional three tallies to clinch the victory, their fourth straight and sixth in their last seven games.

Following Duvall to the plate, little Bert Culver slapped a sizzling single to right, scoring Keller and moving Duvall to third. Culver reached second on the throw in. Then, after Catcher Bob Burns had popped to third for the second out, Jim (Pop) Wharton, who seems

Nats Rally But Lose 5th Straight to Browns

Haynes, Krakauskas, Carrasquel, Jacobs Fail to Check St. Louis; Washington Beaten by Gallagher's Pinch Single

By Shirley Povich.

For a few scream-filled innings the Nats threatened to terminate their losing streak yesterday, but they were merely deluding the 10,000 Ladies' Day customers and the upshot of it all was Washington's fifth straight defeat and a descent into seventh place.

The Nats went to considerable trouble to lose the ball game to the Browns, 11-9. They stirred up six runs between the third and eighth innings to wipe out a 9-3 deficit and tie the score at 9-9, but it was all very futile. Bucky Jacobs, Washington's fourth pitcher of the afternoon, yielded the winning runs.

The man who beat the Nats was big Joe Gallagher, who came out of the dugout in a pinch-hitting role in the eighth inning and swatted the winning run across the plate. A single by Don Heffner and a sacrifice had moved the run to second base when Gallagher, batting for Pitcher George Coffman, delivered a vicious single to leftfield.

Covelli Fights Scalzo for Title Here May 15

By Al Hailey

Frankie Covelli, the Chicago featherweight who went through the peculiar motions of winning the most rounds but losing the fight in his last Washington appearance two years ago, yesterday was signed to fight Petey Scalzo in a 15-round battle for the 126-pound championship May 15 at Griffith Stadium.

With the full support of the National Boxing Association, which only last week bestowed the featherweight title upon Scalzo, Promoter Joe Turner closed the deal after three of the topmost contenders had been eliminated.

Joey Archibald, stripped of his crown by the N. B. A. in March, fights Harry Jeffra in Baltimore May 20 for the New York, Maryland and California version of the championship. Jimmy Perrin, of New Orleans, fought Irish Bobby Ruffin last night in New Orleans in the Louisiana version. And now comes Turner with Covelli, the lad who lost a 10-round decision to Lou Gevinson September 20, 1937, in Griffith Stadium.

Covelli, fighting as a lightweight when he lost to Gevinson, is said to be in the midst of a "sensational" winning streak—one which has included decisions over Jackie Wilson, Eddie Lander, Sixto Escobar and Al Mancini, all of whom from time to time have been mentioned as possible title contenders.

The fight will be Washington's third featherweight championship fight, N. B. A. version. Petey Sarron took the title from Freddy Miller four years ago at the ball park and Joe Archibald was "given" the decision over Baltimore's Jeffra last fall in a battle that blew the lid off the 126-pound class.

Services for Johnny LaRowe Today in Charlottesville

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., May 6.—Many of "the boys" to whom John S. Larowe taught the fundamentals of self-defense—and of good sportsmanship—will gather here tomorrow at his funeral services.

The services for the 73-year-old boxing coach who directed the University of Virginia's ring history for 19 years, will be conducted at 4:30 p. m. in the university chapel.

Larowe, one of Charlottesville's most popular figures in athletics, died at his home Sunday after a prolonged illness.

Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the university, said Larowe was "indeed the possessor of rare gifts which enabled him to combine effective coaching and winning teams with a highly developed sense of good sportsmanship and fair play."

Charles R. Fenwick, alumni president; J. Malcolm Luck, alumni secretary; students, and others closely associated with Larowe joined in expressions of regret at his passing.

He guided the Cavaliers through seven undefeated seasons and to seven Southern Conference championships.

Red Ruffing Routed In Eighth After a Good Job; Homers Bring Victory

By the Associated Press

New York, May 6.—Led by Hank Greenberg and Billy Sullivan, the Detroit Tigers pounced on the World Champion Yankees again today, 6 to 4, for New York's third straight defeat.

For seven innings Red Ruffing held the Bengals to five hits and one run, a homer in the sixth by Charley Gehringer. But in the eighth the Tigers belted him off the mound with three runs on a circuit clout by Greenberg and a pinch homer with one on by Sullivan.

Johnny Murphy, who came to Ruffing's relief, walked the first two batters he faced in the ninth and Greenberg came through with a double off Lee Grissom for the winning run.

Tom Bridges worked the first six innings on the hill for Detroit, yielding all of the Yanks' runs, and then gave way for a pinch hitter. Rookie Tom Seats gave only one hit in finishing and was credited with the victory. The defeat was charged to Murphy.

fourth inning and made short work of Joe Krakauskas. Alex Carrasquel saw duty for one inning and Jacobs took over in the sixth.

Emil Bildilli, the little southpaw who held the Yankees to two hits last week, started to pitch away his 9-to-3 lead when Manager Fred Haney lifted him in the fourth inning. Against Roxie Lawson and Coffman the Nats completed the job of tying the score, but Bill Trotter terminated the Washington scoring in the last two innings.

Buddy Lewis' double set the Nats up in a two-run lead in the first inning, but Haynes pitched three runs to the Browns in the third. He served up a triple to Alna Strange, a double to George McQuinn and another triple to Radcliff. And before the inning was over he wild-pitched Radcliff home with the third run of the inning.

In the fourth, the Browns went downward against both Haynes and Krakauskas. Bingles by Heffner and Swift routed Haynes and Bildilli greeted Krakauskas with a single to right. Krakky contributed a wild throw on Strange's [illegible] that didn't help any, and then [illegible]Quinn sort of mopped up by [illegible]nging a triple against the left-[illegible] wall. Radcliffe drove over the fifth run of the inning with the fifth hit of the inning.

The Nats started whittling at the Browns' six-run lead in the fourth. But they scored only one run in that inning, despite the fact that Pofahl led off with a triple to left and Evans followed with a double.

In the fifth, against Lawson, the Nats took a three-run chunk out of the Browns' lead after filling the bases with none out on a pair of walks and Walker's single. A run scored as Strange robbed Bloodworth of a hit, but Pofahl doubled to left to send another run home. A third scored on Evans' infield out.

George Case led off the sixth with a double that was transformed into a run, and in the seventh the Nats tied the score, but they muffed a chance to go into the lead. Bloodworth was the hero of that uprising against Coffman. He opened the inning with a long triple to center. He remained on third as Pofahl fouled out, but Rookie Al Evans tied the score with a single to left. Evans was sacrificed to second and moved to third when Berardino muffed Case's grounder, but Lewis left the potential winning run on base.

11th Inning Home Run By Billy Herman Beats Phillies After Diz Goes

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 6.—Philadelphia's Phillies knocked out Dizzy Dean in the fifth inning today, but all they got for their efforts was an overtime game that Billy Herman won for the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4, with an eleventh inning homer off Relief Pitcher Lloyd Brown.

Bunching 8 of their 12 hits off Dean in four and two-third innings, the Phillies inflicted the third kayo in four starts on the $185,000 hurler for a 4-to-1 lead. However, while Ken Raffensberger, Charley Root nad Larry French shut out the Phils on four hits the remaining six innings, the Cubs closed in by bunching four hits for two runs, to remove Si Johnson in the sixth, and tied it up off Kirby Higbe and Brown on two passes, two wild pitches and Hank Leiber's infield single in the seventh.

Herman got a double and single, as well as his homer. Leiber, hitting in his twelfth straight game, during which he has made 25 hits in 49 times at bat, got a double and two singles, to feature the Cubs' 13-hit attack.

Reds Break Loose In Sixth, Win, 9-1

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 6.—The rampant Reds staged a seven-run spree in the sixth inning today to overwhelm the New York Giants, 9 to 1, on the five-hit hurling of Gene (Junior) Thompson.

The game served as the 1940 debut of Paul Dean, who pitched two scoreless innings in relief for the Giants. The one-time St. Louis Cardinal hero had an easy seventh inning after supplanting Harry Gumbert, but the Reds got two singles and two long, hard flies in the eighth.

Gumbert was the victim of all the Cincinnati scoring, yielding a run in the first and again in the third, each time on three hits, and then going to pieces in the sixth during a five-hit bombardment climaxed by Harry Craft's three-run homer.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

There was little merit to the performance of the Nats as a team yesterday, but individually some of the boys did all right. Rookie Al Evans was the outsanding performer of the lot and to him goes the chief award in today's distribution of points in the Man of the Month contest.

To Evans, four points, because he made two hits, drove in three runs, and slugged the Nats into a tie in the seventh inning with a single.

To Jimmy Pofahl, three points, because he doubled and tripled and played a clever game in the field.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, one point, because he figured in two fast double plays and scored a run after making a triple.

To Gerald Walker, one point, because he made three of the Nats hits and drove in two runs. The totals:

Cecil Travis	12	Zeke Bonura	4
George Case	7	Rick Ferrell	4
Jimmy Bloodworth	7	Al Evans	4
Jimmy Pofahl	6	Sid Hudson	2
Buddy Lewis	4	Gerald Walker	1

Homer Helps Athletics Beat Chicago, 3-2

By International News Service

Philadelphia, May 6.—Nelson Potter today scattered nine Chicago hits and the Philadelphia Athletics registered a 3-to-2 victory over the White Sox.

Sam Chapman's homer in the third inning and a two-run splurge in the sixth were enough to win for the Mackmen. The White Sox picked up a run in the first and a run in the third to hold a one-run lead until the sixth.

John Rigney, Chicago hurler also went the route and gave nine hits, besides walking two Philadelphians.

Records Fall As Card Track Team Wins

Catholic U. Adds William and Mary to Its List of Victims

Nine meet records were broken and one stadium mark tied yesterday at Brookland, where Catholic University's unbeaten track team added William and Mary, Norfolk division, to its long string of victims, 73-44.

The Indians were operating under the guise of a one-man track team in Johnny Brown, who scored 24 of his team's 44 points.

Feature event of the day was the 100-yard dash in which the stadium record of 10 seconds flat was equalled. To Larson of the invaders went the honor of tying the mark. He held a fine chance of breaking the record had he not pulled a charley-horse with 8 yards left of the race.

Besides the 100, meet records were broken in the broad jump, 440-yard dash, mile run, shotput, 880-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles, high jump and javelin.

Little Johnny Corbett, undefeated this year in dual competition, unraveled a 4 minute 30 second mile to win easily this event, lowering the meet standard by 15 secnods.

The victorious Cards will attempt to add to their winning streak tomorrow when Western Maryland's Green Terrors will be encountered at Brookland.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 6.—"The Man Nobody Knows" lives in a goldfish bowl compared to Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, the Chicago woman whose colt Gallahadion won the Kentucky Derby Saturday. She has been around big league racing since 1935, with a bankroll fit to choke the Trojan horse plus the heart of a great gambler. But few reporters ever got around to asking her the census questions.

CONSIDINE

Dave Alexander, the turf expert for the Morning Telegraph, got one of the rare interviews on the coast, and was musing over it today. The picture he paints of her indicates that the sports pages have been neglecting some great colorful material, a point any of us who ever saw this handsome woman sitting in the glaring first row of the Saratoga yearling sales, outbidding the Whitneys, should have recognized.

She is fiftyish, self-assured, with a streak of gray running through her hair and, the time we saw her, was hung with mink and orchids. Her fearless bidding has made her the patrol angel of the auctioneers at Saratoga and other sales, for if she likes the looks of a yearling she is said to keep bidding until she gets what she wants. She has been stung plenty of times, but she bought Gallahadion for $5,000. He made $60,150 in 2 minutes and 5 seconds Saturday afternoon, after making the grand sum of $180 as a 2-year-old.

When Mrs. Mars' husband died he left her a candy business, a few show horses and a few thoroughbreds. She decided to keep the first and third assets, and got rid of the show ponies. She began to build up the candy company until it is now one of America's largest and —according to the boys around the tracks—put one over the staid old jockey club when she got them to approve "Milky Way Farms" as the name of her stable. There is a rule against the use of commercial names.

She had good success with her horses in 1935, with Reaping Reward and others. But in the next few years she burned up a mint of money in racing. Everything she bought turned out to be a selling plater. They said her stable bills would gross well over $1,000,000. Two years ago she abruptly changed trainers, picking up Roy Waldron, who had worked for Mrs. Iselin. But she never got discouraged. She told Alexander, "Listen, son, when you've gone broke three or four times in business, it doesn't matter much when one of your horses loses a race."

She formed an early attachment for Gallahadion, although many of her friends considered hi minferior to the stable's Tough Hombre, who is by Hard Tack, Seabiscuit's daddy. But Mrs. Mars liked his Derby chances as early as last January when—to her horror—she thought for a while that she had forgotten to nominate him for Col. Winn's great gallop.

Even after he was licked on the Coast a couple of time, after going to the post as favorite in the Santa Anita Derby, Mrs. Mars thought enough of him to name a dog-show trophy she was presenting after him. Of him she said, months ago:

"He's a horse who can do everything. He has speed and he can come from behind and all tracks look alike to him. I like horses that can do everything."

The outcome of the Derby, which brought with it the depressing defeat of Bimelech, will only heighten the interest in young Al Vanderbilt's Preakness next Saturday at Pimlico. There must be an awful lot of people in the country who still believe that Bimelech is unbeatable. And though he must be a pretty tired colt by this time, it would not be surprising to see him go to the post a favorite next Saturday. Certainly Gallahadion won't have the backing in the Preakness that last year's winner of the Derby, Johnston, had the following week at Pimlico. Even though it came up mud last Preakness Day, and even though it was generally known that Johnstown was a bad mudder and Challedon a very good one, Johnstown went to the post at 2 or 3-to-4, while Challedon, who won easily, paid $14.40.

The Preakness, in case you didn't know, was named after the horse Preakness. The horse, by the great Lexington, was named in turn after the township of Preakness, N. J., whence sprung its owners. Preakness won the Dinner Party Stakes, feature of a 4-race program which opened Pimlico on October 25, 1870. The race incidentally had been devised on the night of August 10, 1868, at a dinner party given by M. H. Sanford at Saratoga for a group of Maryland sportsmen. They agreed to run a 2-mile sweepstakes in the fall of 1870 "over a course to be built in or near Baltimore." For want of a better name, they called it the Dinner Party Stakes.

Preakness came from a mile back to win the thing and became so great a favorite that thousands came to the track the next morning to see him in his stall. In 1873 Pimlico named a 1¼-mile race after him and it was run on May 27 of that year. Survivor won it, beating the twin-favorites owned by Gov. Oden Bowie and by August Belmont. The race fell on evil days and in 1889 only two horses entered. It was discontinued until 1909 and has not missed since. This will be its fiftieth running.

By Bill Burnett

Western High's best all-around ball player is Carmel Nance, southpaw pitcher, it was proved yesterday when the Red Raiders came from four runs behind to beat Woodrow Wilson, 10-8, in an 11-inning battle at Wilson's Stadium.

With his team on the short end of an 8-4 count in the third, and with Starting Pitcher Joe Nimnon unable to retire the final man, Nance took over and was credited with his second interhigh triumph of the season. He put the Raiders up even with the defending champion Central nine at the head of the series standings. Wilson, with the loss, dropped to sixth place.

Nance's activity for the afternoon went like this: After relieving Nimnon, he ended Wilson's four-run uprising by forcing Bart Fugler to ground out, third to first. He retired the side in order in the fourth, and then in the fifth after two singles and an error had put men on second and third, he whiffed Frank Hettenkemer to pull out of the hole.

One man, Nino Briscuso, got to base in the sixth on a double, but that was as far as he got. In the seventh three batters faced Nance and each struck out. Three more struck out in the eighth, though a single was wedged into proceedings. Nance then figured in Western's tying run in that frame, bouncing a hard grounder to second base to sacrifice Jim Malarkey home.

Finally, in the eleventh, Nance whaled a triple to deep center that scored Ed Kockrille and Malarkey with the winning runs. It was one of the best blows of the day. He was thrown out trying to stretch it into a homer, but the damage had already been done.

In all, Nance allowed five hits in his 8 1-3-inning stint, fanning 15, giving up three bases on balls and no runs.

Little Dick Kaufman, another southpaw, started for Wilson, and after a rough first inning held the opposition reasonably safe until the seventh. With the score at 8-6 in Wilson's favor, Kauffman gave hits to the first two men to face him, accounting for a Western run, and he was retired in favor of Briscuso. The latter finished the game with three runs and four hits charged against him.

Billiard Champion Appears Twice At Arcadia Against Gene Ruork

Back in 1906 a young shaver of a billiard player was astounding the sports world by defeating the famous Maurice Vignaux, of France, in Paris. At that time Mordecai "Three-Fingered" Brown was the best left-handed pitcher in the National League, another Roosevelt (Theodore) was President, Papa Neri was passing Gibraltar on a good ship en route to America from the old country.

That young billiard player was Willie Hoppe. Today at 52, he is still leading the field. Only recently he won again the championship of the world in three-cushioned billiards. And in winning he scored a shutout, taking 20 straight games.

Today and Wednesday Hoppe will make one of his infrequent visits to Washington. He is to appear at the Arcadia Billiard Parlor at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. to demonstrate the cue wizardry that has made him the headline billiard player of the universe for the past four decades. He'll play Gene Ruark, former national amateur champion and present District titlist.

Young Willie started pushing a cue at the tender age of 6. His father had a hotel in Cornwell-on-the-Hudson. In the back room was a pool table. It was here he received his early training.

Before Hoppe had reached his majority he had defeated the wizard, Jake Schaefer, sr., to win the balkline title. He has held every title in the billiard world. Some observers say if he had concentrated on straight pool, he would have swept his field in that line of endeavor.

Before the recent tournament at Chicago, Hoppe went into training a month before the event started. He cannot drive a car because the wheel stiffens his wrists. He skips the movies lest they irritate his eyes.

In his many years as a billiard campaigner, Hoppe has had his ups and downs. In 1921 young Jake Schaefer caught up with the old master when he had an ailing arm. And in '23 Welker Cochran extended Hoppe but was nosed out in a playoff. In 1925 young Jake again took the crown but Hoppe had played with his cue arm badly cut because of a fall on the ice at Manhasset.

Hoppe figures he has walked an average of a thousand miles a year around a billiard table in exhibitions and match play. The exercise a player gets generally keeps him in good physical condition.

The champion regrets that the youngsters of today don't take up the game as they did in the early days of his youth. In those days, relates Hoppe, billiard players were idols of the kids of the land. Their pictures used to appear with cigarette ads, and newspapers used to give column after column of billiard publicity, but nowadays, with baseball, golf, football taking the headlines, billiards has dropped out of the limelight it held.

Hoppe has the satisfaction of having lived a full life, and he continues drinking in the good life that lies ahead. Franklin, another Roosevelt, is now in the White House, Lefty Grove is the king of the left-handers, and Papa Neri is happy and content in his Monroe street home as Willie Hoppe, the perennial rookie, rolls on.

Center Market Nine Defeats Maritime, 8-6

In a game cut to five innings because of darkness, Center Market took an 8-6 victory over Maritime Commission yesterday in the Departmental Baseball League. Pitcher Rafterry held the Commissioners to five hits, but kicked in with as many walks. McDonald had a home run in the losing cause, the blow featuring a five-run splurge in the second.

Bill Liggett Hurls Shutout

Bill Liggett, star hurler of O'Donnell's Sea Grill, checked in one of his finest pitching performances yesterday as he shut out Russell Motors, 5-0, in The Washington Post Industrial League. He was touched for six cattered safeties.

Rour runs in the first inning gave the Grillmen all the lead they needed and they coasted in. Third Baseman Mizel got the best hit, a home run.

One-Armed Terp Freshman Beats Central

Behind the three-hit pitching of Bill Fulton, a one-armed left-hander, Maryland freshmen handed the strong Central High School nine its second loss of the season, 8-2, yesterday in a game at College Park.

Fulton, who catches, throws with the same hand and hits by laying the bat across the stub of his crippled right arm, turned in a brilliant performance, fanning 12 and getting two hits himself. The slender star singled and doubled in two trips, drove in his team's first two runs in the third.

The Terp freshmen added two more runs in the fourth on singles by Kuster and Cleveland and a Central error. Then in the fifth they made it 6-0 before Central broke the ice in the sixth on two consecutive errors by the frosh. Fenlon reached base when Hoopengardner booted his grounder and scored when Boothe, Maryland shortstop, muffed a pop fly. Central's second and only earned run was spawned in the seventh of a walk and a single by Fenlon.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

Anglers interested in figures might like to look over the Encyclopedia of Sports. They would find most intriguing the annual bill America pays for sports, and particularly angling.

ACKERMAN.

Fishing comes first with an outlay of $1,200,000,000, more than a fourth of the $4,000,000,000 total. Hunting and firearms comes second with $650,000,000, motorboating third with expenditures of $600,000,000, and golf, which for the past two years has been the only sport whose expenditures for equipment topped the outlay for fishing equipment, fourth with an annual outlay of $500,000,000.

Figures so large it is almost impossible to understand their significance, yet those men, yes, and women too, whose hobbies are fishing and hunting, shell out more dollars each year than is spent in buying and equipping all the ballparks, teams, race tracks and horses in the country. To this may be added the income of both, and still not approach the expenditures of anglers in pursuit of their fun.

Frank G. Menke, in arriving at these figures, says there are about 12,000,000 anglers in the country, of which 6,000,000 are licensed. Some staticians are so optimistic of their account of fishermen as to put the total in excess of 20,000,000.

In our mind that would be alright if every section of the country were so avid in its pursuit of the sport as around New York, the Washington area, and southern Florida, where there is little doubt but what one person in every four fishes at least once each year.

In and around Washington there are anglers who spend no more than $5 each year. Then there are others whose outlay average several hundred dollars every 12 months, and that with a midwinter trip to southern waters, will run the total up to a thousand dollars or more. We actually know more Washingtonians than we have fingers and toes who spend from $5 to $10,000 each year to bend a rod and hear the sing of a reel.

For those in the middle and upper brackets there are probably 50 in the lower. An average that would be fair, and taking Menke's figures of 12,000,000 anglers, which is conservative to say the least, gives a total expenditure of $1,200,000,000.

Prospect of 'Open' Race Lures Large Field for Preakness

Bimelech and Dit at Pimlico; Gallahadion En Route to Track For Saturday Classic

Pimlico, Md., May 6.—While only seven horses could be lured into the Kentucky Derby to battle Bimelech, the result of the Blue Grass classic has caused a rush of owners and trainers to the Preakness. With Bimelech beaten and the bubble bursted as far as his "superhorse" rating is concerned, the Maryland Jockey Club is delighted to find it has a "wide open" race and a big field on its hands.

Five days before Saturday's golden jubilee Preakness, the situation is like this:

"Sure" starters—Gallahadion, Dit, Bimelech, Mioland, Royal Man, Pictor, Andy K., Your Chance.

Probable starters—Pass Out, Sky Dog, Carrier Pigeon, Dusky Fox, Woof Woof.

Possible starters—Jacomar, Sun Pharos, Merry Knight, Snow Ridge, Asp.

Bimelech and Dit, noses apart in the Derby, arrived here today in the same car. Pictor, Royal Man (of the Derby field) and Sky Dog W-L Ranch hope, were shipped in together. Gallahadion, the surprise Louisville winner, and Mioland, fourth in the Derby, are en route from Kentucky and are due here tomorrow.

With the exception of Carrier Pigeon, owned by C. V. Whitney, and Woof Woof, the property of John Hay Whitney, all the Preakness prospects are on the grounds or heading this way. Both of the Whitneys have indicated that they would ship a Preakness starter from New York.

Woof Woof won the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah last winter, but J. H. Whitney has two other eligibles. C. V. Whitney has Flight Command on the list in addition to Carrier Pigeon.

Last autumn Waldron believed the best of his 3-year-old prospects was Tough Hombre, an eligible to the Preakness along with Gallahadion and Chatted . . . It wasn't until the San Vincente Handicap at Santa Anita this past February that he realized which was the better horse . . . In that race Gallahadion finished first and Tough Hombre was seventeenth in a field of 19 starters . . . Trainer Tom Smith and Owner Charles S. Howard of Mioland are certain to renew their feud with Gallahadion . . . In the San Vincente the Milky Way horse was first and the Howard star was thirteenth. A month later Mioland was first in the San Juan Capistrano at Santa Anita and Gallahadws fifth

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GARDEN GAL, $40.40, $13.70, $8.80; BUCKLE UP, $3.90, $3.40; MASTHEAD, $24.80.

GARDEN GAL, steadied along while on the outside and in the first flight, responded gamely when put to a drive and wore down BUCKLE UP to win going away. BUCKLE UP was rushed to take command in the opening furlong, shook off CODOLL to open a clear lead, but could not resist the winner while closing gamely. MASTHEAD raced greenly and came willingly at the end. BUTCHER BOY came to contention with a bold rush and was tiring at the end. CODOLL followed the pace in the early stages and swerved while stopping in the stretch. LAST BET was cut down at the post and was excused by the stewards, but all bets stood.

Daily double, SPARROW CHIRP and GARDEN Gal, paid $130.00.

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:25½. Winner, Brandywine Stable's ch. g. MILL RACE took command when placed to a drive leaving the fourteenth fence and fell at the fifteenth.

TIME PASSES, away slowly and sent wide for racing room, came to WISE SHINE with a bold rush, swerved into the pacemaker and drew out gradually thereafter. WISE SHINE forged to the front early, drew clear and was fighting it out willingly when impeded. Wholey's claim of foul against the winner was not allowed. SCULLERY MAID was a keen forward factor from the start and closed gamely. NOTORIETY weakened gradually after forcing the early pace.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:27½. Winner, H. P. Headley's b. g. RAMASES, showing good speed from the start, opened a lead at once and drew out in the stretch run to win handily. PORT WALES was sent up on the inside to reach contention and bore out in the stretch run. CANTERUP showed a good effort. PURCELLVILLE lacked early speed and rallied mildly.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $5,000 added. Jennings Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:56. Off at 4:57. Winner, J. W. Y. SPEED TO SPARE, first away, shook off HONEY CLOUD in the early stages. Three out entering the stretch and held on gamely, but could not resist the winner. SLOW MOTION was sent to the leader with a bold rush approaching the stretch, was carried wide by SPEED TO SPARE and was weakening at the end. LADY MARYLAND was held safe. CROSS VINE was held safe.

UNFAILING, steadied along while forced wide at the first turn, came through on the rail entering the stretch and withstood a long drive courageously. COMPANY HALT, rated while closest to CHALOTAUR'S pace, took command leaving the backstretch, turned back EASTER HOLIDAY, but could not resist the winner while closing willingly. EASTER HOLIDAY moved up boldly to make a bid after a half and weakened gradually thereafter. ALSANG, outrun early, came between horses to better his position, but was held safe.

Dear Al:

I have a sneaky suspicion that Challedon will be in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap next winter. Couldn't get an inkling out of either Owner W. L. Brann or Trainer Lou Schaefer on that angle while coming up from Louisville. They did say, however, that Challedon was being brought along slowly and would not start before mid-June or even later. This idicates that that they expect to have the Challenger II colt at tops before letting him make his 1940 debut. It also points to the fact that, once in shape, Challedon will not be let down at the end of the season. We shall see what we shall see. Although I may be speaking a bit out of turn, Mr. Brann, in discussing Challedon as a stud prospect, said that he was thinking about starting him at a $500 stud fee. Asked about retiring Challedon, the popular master of the Glade Valley Farm, said Challedon was bred to run and that is what he will do "until he tells us with his racing that he has had enough." Ebonito, owned by Harry Parr, was scratched out of yesterday's Jennings Handicap due to an attack of coughing. Trainer Roy Waldron, called by Dave Woods, Pimlico's publicity director, said over the phone that he was shipping Gallahadion to the Preakness "if he could get two stalls." Do you think he got them? Waldron's young daughter, Patricia, saw her pop's horse win the Derby, her first visit to Kentucky. When he was putting her on the train last Sunday, she turned and said, "Daddy, don't you think I had better get a pair of dark glasses to keep the photographers from bothering me?" Alfred Vanderbilt is still trying to get his first winner of the year. Yesterday he hoped Swami would turn the trick, but the horse was ailing and was scratched. Art Brown gets his vacation starting Friday and with the Preakness and Charles Town coming up he's as playful as a kitten. Incidentally, don't forget that Press Club outing Saturday at Charles Town. Good time last year, better time this year.

Confucius' Wise Shine was second yesterday and couldn't get it after his rider claimed a foul. The bank roll is $28 and for today, he say: WEATHERITE for a deuce.

First Race—Perigee, representing Hal Price Headley and an invader from Kentucky, broke slowly and lost all chance in her last at Keeneland. Previous to that effort she finished second in a fast run race. Pompella was sold for $5,000 as a yearling. She makes her first start today. Weatherite displayed good effort in her last and may be a factor.

Second Race—Bud's Light was pitted against high grade platers with little success after her winning effort at Havre. She meets a mediocre band of Maryland breds today and should register. Betrothed was second in his last and figures to offer speediest contention. Joe Smokey is in good form and rates a money chance.

Third Race—Rideaway won his last race by three lengths. He is reputed to be inconsistent but is apparently in top form and should account for this number. Rockmayne fell when competing against the top horse last outing. He is capable of showing a better performance. Walkaway raced well last year.

Fourth Race—Pendencerico hasn't been out since 1938 but at that time campaigned successfully with $3,500 platers. He is reported training well under the supervision of Dick Pending and will be ready for today's race. In Memory is the sound contention of the race off good efforts this spring. Brush Hook has class but is unsound.

Fifth Race—Tripit may not have had the speed to threaten in the Ral Parr Handicap last week but is pitted against a field he should beat in this allowance affair. Don Orlan won two at Havre but finished behind the top horse in his last and merits second call. Bright Camp was bet on last out and may be a good thing.

Sixth Race—Your Chance was one of the top line juveniles last year. He makes his first start of the year but his ability to go a route gives him the edge. Sun Pharos raced well on the West Coast this winter and his recent New York race was impressive. The Wheatley Stable Entry should be able to corner third place.

Seventh Race—Nicky was no match for Rought Biscuit and Challamore last out and probably needed the conditioning received in that race. The competition here is cheaper than usual. Minorca has shown some good trials this spring and merits a good chance. County Cork raced well at Havre but recent races have been poor.

Eighth Race—Oversight, flashing his best form, took the measure of a speedy band of $2,000 platers in his last race. He receives the call in an open race. Presidential would be a sharp contender in the event of mud. Miss Ponne won her last easily but moves up the claiming ladder.

Best Bet—Bud's Light.

Horses to Watch

Double B—Likely to win another purse before meeting ends.

Grand Duke—There's a race in the book to suit this one. Toss out last.

Sensational Inactivity Marks Whole List As Allied Reverses, Mediterranean Threat Hold Trading to 526,290 Shares, Off .05 Point

New York, May 6.—Sensational inactivity was the story of the stock market today. There were a number of major developments which did not affect stock prices, but the fact remains that the figures covering the big board were not impressive.

Volume on the exchange amounted to only 526,290 shares, the smallest since March 18. The composite average showed only a negligible loss of 0.05 point.

Outside of the gyrations of stocks, there was the surprising gain of steel operations and a break in sterling. The steel industry is scheduled to operate this week at 65.8 per cent of capacity, a gain of 4 points over the previous week.

The decline in sterling's free rate carried it to a new low for about seven years. The rate touched $3.41 and closed a quarter cent above that level, off 6¼ cents for the day. Selling of the currency was a reflection of the uneasiness over the position of the Allies.

The major subject of conversation in financial circles today was the situation which confronts the British Parliament in its meeting tomorrow.

Adding to the uncertainties which confronted investors today was the news of the massing of Italian troops and the word that President Roosevelt had cut short his stay at Hyde Park.

This overshadowed all other considerations in today's trading. War stocks came back somewhat after their sell-out of last week. Aviations gained slightly and there was considerable interest in some of the equipment shares which have made munitions in the past or are in a position to make them in the future. The majority of issues held within a fractional range.

Other items of financial news which were appreciated by the speculative community included the first quarter's operations statement of Douglas Aircraft, which showed a record, and the sales report of Sears, Roebuck & Co. for the three months ended April 30, showing a 9 per cent gain.

There were few major changes among the leaders today. Baldwin Locomotive was the most active and gained a major fraction. Curtiss-Wright led the aviations and was unchanged. Montgomery Ward came back one-eighth after its severe decline of last wek. DuPont was up a point and Union Carbide lost a point, but most of the speculative issues held within a fractional range.

Bond Trading Is Dull

Listed bond trading was dull today, and most issues showed only fractional variations. The week-end developments failed to encourage traders or investors, and the turnover was only $3,800,000. Some Norwegian issues again were marked spasmodically lower. Australian and Canadian bonds were weak. Domestic issues held close to former levels. Some Norways were off 18 to 27 points. Danish bonds improved somewhat. German government bonds were better, owing to the success of that country in Norway.

United States Treasury securities edged modestly higher, but the small fractional advances were due mainly to a market assumption that no new money financing will be done next month.

Speculative domestic bonds were idle, with changes measured almost entirely in fractions.

Cotton Slumps 11 to 16 Points Under Selling

New York, May 6 (AP).—A rush of selling by domestic and foreign interests lowered cotton futures 11 to 16 points today. The market had to digest bad news from start to finish.

Chief bearish factor, brokers said, was the increasing publicity given to the poor outlook for next season's exports of the staple.

The New York Cotton Exchange Service said: "countries in which cotton consumption has already been greatly reduced included Germany and others of Central Europe, Japan and China. Japan, by forbidding the use of cotton goods for most civilian purposes, has reduced its spinning of all cottons by about 1,200,000 bales."

U. S. Steel Leaders, Stockholders Weigh Probable Trends

By the Associated Press

Hoboken, N. J., May 6.—Indications the steel industry has turned upward again following recession of the last few months were cited today by Edward R. Stettinius, chairman of U. S. Steel Corporation, at the annual stockholders meeting today.

The chairman said "big steel's" current operations are estimated at 63.1 per cent of ingot capacity against 43.3 per cent in the same period last year and 29.9 per cent for the similar period of 1938. It is understood the present operating rate is well above that of a month ago.

The meeting attracted nearly 300 stockholders, a near record attendance that taxed the capacity of the drab narrow assembly hall in which "big steel" has held its annual meeting for a decade or more.

Key Executives Attend

The corporation, in line with its custom, had many key executives on hand to greet stockholders. Sitting at the center of the presiding group of officers at the long table were Stettinius and Benjamin F. Fairless, 49-year-old president. Also on hand were veteran executives or directors, and former Presidents James A. Farrell and William A. Irvin. Other officers included E. M. Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee and Nathan L. Miller, general counsel.

Stettinius said that while war has boosted the corporation's export sales, the management believed that "war orders represent only a fleeting prosperity and war business is certain to result in a disruptive shifting of our economy."

The youthful chairman asserted export business thus far this year has run around 13 per cent of the total tonnage compared with 9 per cent in 1939. In the last four months of 1939 export shipments were 582,000 tons. In the first three months of 1940 exports have accounted for 462,000 tons.

Tin Plate Program

Stettinius declared the corporation is not planning to alter or enlarge its facilities to war business. However, he disclosed a decision to round out a modernization program in tin-plate production.

At Pittsburgh the plan calls for installation of another cold reduction mill and processing equipment to increase production of cold reduced black plate at the Irvin Works. In the Chicago and Birmingham districts installation of additional processing and finishing equipment is planned at the tin mills.

Commenting on the U. S. Government's naval armament program, Stettinius said that if the corporation were to receive orders for the entire amount of steel required this year, the tonnage would amount to only about 1 per cent of U. S. Steel's finished production in 1939.

Operations to Increase

New York, May 6 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today the steel industry would operate this week at 65.8 per cent of capacity, an increase of four points from last week to the highest production level since February.

Except for the first week of January, when mills were resuming after a year-end curtailment, it was the widest weekly advance of the year.

On a reaction from the autumn industrial boom, caused partly by a great wave of buying at the outset of the war, the steel operating rate dropped from 86.1 in mid-January to a low of 60 per cent two weeks ago.

This week's rate compared with 61.8 per cent the previous week, 61.3 a month ago and 47 a year ago.

Trade sources attributed the expansion partly to resumption of buying by miscellaneous consumers as inventories acquired in the autumn buying rush became depleted. A recent temporary cut in prices of automobile sheets was counted an influence in the revival of buying.

Wheat Drops 1c on Weather, War Reports

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 6.—The price of wheat fell more than a cent a bushel today as the market reflected favorable domestic weather, continued heavy receipts at terminals and failure of war to stimulate any unusual European buying of breadstuffs.

Trade was very nervous, however, and there were frequent rallies which all but wiped out the losses. The tense situation in Europe, especially in the Balkans, could not be relegated entirely to the background but numerous traders who have bought recently on war developments sold in order to limit losses.

Rails Ready For War Use, Gormley Says

Different System Now Than in 1917, Engineers Are Told

The railroad machine now is a totally different one than existed at the time of the World War, M. J. Gormley, executive assistant of the Association of American Railroads, yesterday told the Society of American Military Engineers, emphasizing that the rail lines are thoroughly organized to meet any demands of commercial or war traffic that may be required.

The thing to be remembered, Gormley said, is that the railroads were established to provide transportation and not for the purpose of having their equipment used for storage purposes.

"If, in the event of another war," Gormley continued, "we could avoid the hysteria and retain the proper prospective with respect to the volume of the war load and not interfere with the normal methods of movement, no difficulty whatever will be encountered in providing adequate and satisfactory service."

Gormley said that congestion of freight traffic and many long delays in unloading cars were more responsible for Government operation of the railroads in the World War than anything else. At one time during the World War, he said, more than 200,000 cars were under load but still could not be moved because they could not be unloaded at destination.

"The seriousness of that situation is best appreciated," he added, "when we consider that tying up over 200,000 cars reduced the transportation capacity by approximately 20 to 25 per cent."

"The railroads are now thoroughly organized through the Association of American Railroads to meet immediately any demands of commercial or war traffic that may be required and no other central organization is needed.

Rail President Wants U. S. to Stay Out of Business

New York, May 6 (AP).—Prospects for reasonable future regular dividends on stock of Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railway "are good if—but only if—Government should once again confine itself to its proper functions," Fitzgerald Hall, president, told stockholders in the annual report.

The Government, said Hall, must "stop invading the field of management, get out of competition with the railroads, and treat all carriers in substantially the same way."

The N. C. & St. L. paid a dividend of $1 a share on capital stock in February. The last previous dividend was $1.50 a share in August, 1931. Louisville & Nashville railroad owns 183,748 of the 256,000 outstanding N. C. & St. L. capital shares.

Leo Pass Wins Hines Trophy Third Time

Shoots 82; Thurston 2d, Stroke Back; Elble 3d With 84

Leo Pass, one of Indian Spring's long-hitting amateurs, won the Gen. Frank T. Hines trophy for the third time yesterday at Kenwood as the U. S. Veterans' Administration golfers held their tenth annual tournament. The field of 88 included 18 women golfers.

Pass was out in 40 and back in 42 for an 82, the winning total by a single stroke over Dr. John A. Thurston. Otto Elble, another three-time champion, was third with 84.

Dan Pratt won the blind bogey with R. L. Jarnigan second and D. T. Lohr third, while Milton Ridden's 30 putts won the contest over L. Winnike, with 31 and A. S. Thomson, 32. The longest drive was Floyd Baker's 229-yard clout, while Francis P. Kelly was second, with a 208-yard drive, and Dan Pratt third, 204.

Mrs. Juanita Pollock topped the women's field with a 103 score with Beulah Dicks second with 109 and and Marie Birmingham third, 111.

Miss Dicks won the blind bogey with Miss Birmingham second and Katherine Greeley third. Five tied for low putts with 36 each, Mrs. Pollock, Madeline Alber, Bess Bryan, Miss Dicks and Agnes McWhinnie. Driving contest winners were Miss Birmingham, first; Miss Bryan, second, and Miss Dicks, third.

Crusher Casey Heads Mat Card At Riverside

There'll be "wearing of the green" tomorrow night at Riverside Stadium when Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin imports Steve (Crusher) Casey, the wrestling toast of Ireland, for the headline bout with Don Evans, 230-pound Dallas groan artist. In a co-feature, Bob (The Terror) Weatherly takes on Abe Coleman.

Casey, who hasn't appeared here in more than a year, is one of the leading 26 claimants to the world's wrestling crown. A delegation from the local Hibernian society is to be in the ringside to cheer on the Irishman.

Steve's last big venture was to defeat "Tiger" Warrenton, heavyweight boxer, before a nonpaying house in Boston Garden in a wrestler-fighter affair that almost saw him knocked out by the "Tiger."

The supporting card brings out Jimmy Austeri versus Warren Bockwinkel, Tommy Rae versus Maurice LaChapelle, and Rudy Dusek versus Jim Coffield.

After tomorrow night's bouts at Riverside, wrestling interest turns to Turner's Arena for Thursday night's dash of drama, with Promoter Joe Turner trotting out Wladyslaw Talum against Andy Meixner on the card featuring Nanjo Singh and The Swedish Angel, latest of the wrestling "angels." Something called Zim Zam Zum will swap groans with Pat Corrigan in the semifinal.

REA 'Circus' Shows Marvels of Electricity In Labor-Saving Devices for Farms

Mrs. Roosevelt To Attend Exhibit At Chapel Point

By a Staff Correspondent

Chapel Point, Md., May 6.—Historic 250-year-old St. Ignatius Church looked down on brightly lighted tents tonight where nearly 1,000 persons of this area were gathered to observe what electricity can do to increase farm production and provide labor-saving devices for the rural worker and his wife.

Everything from grain separators to a simple contrivance which will fry steaks with electric light bulbs is being demonstrated in this three-day stand of a traveling tent show of the Rural Electrification Administration. The show is sponsored by the Southern Maryland Tricounty Cooperative Association.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is expected to visit the demonstration tomorrow afternoon. Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, will address the group in the main tent at 8 p. m. tomorrow, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and REA Administrator Harry Slattery will be the chief speakers on Wednesday at 8 p. m.

Engines Featured

Featured in the show are one-half to five horsepower engines, D. W. Teare, farm tour manager, explained to last night's audience.

"This type power motor is important, because a five horsepower electric motor is as efficient as a ten-horsepower gasoline driven motor," he said.

Other speakers tonight included Project Manager Forrest Coakley and Walter P. Coppinger, of REA. "As You Light It," a play on the theme of the importance of electricity, featured Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Compton, Miss Frances Brown and John White. It was directed by Mrs. C. L. Young.

Electrified equipment for the four main types of farm—dairy, poultry, general purposes, and fruit and vegetable—were featured on trailers of the traveling show.

Milking machines, separators and other dairy equipment were shown as of vital importance to the well-ordered dairy farm. Electrically driven grain separators with overhead bins for shelled corn, ground feed, oats and wheat were demonstrated. It was pointed out that a farmer can set his machine running, and go about his other chores, while his grain is ground.

From an overturned tub and a 100-watt electric light bulb, a pig brooder can be home-manufactured at a cost of $3. Upkeep cost is only 25 cents a week, the exhibit demonstrated. Seed beds, electrically heated, were demonstrated.

Light Bulb Cooker

Evoking as much interest from men as from housewives was an electric light bulb in a light-tight waterless cooker which is placed in a cardboard box. A steak placed inside the cooker for 40 minutes with a 100 watt bulb will cook it rare; a 150 watt bulb, medium; and a 200 watt bulb, well-done.

Traveling with the show are demonstration units of large electric companies showing the newest types of both home and farm electric equipment.

Between 15 and 20 men travel regularly with the show which has been seen by nearly 300,000 persons since it started its tour in Michigan last July.

Tomorrow morning high school youth of southern Maryland will visit the exhibit. Miss Evelyn Bloome, of the show staff, will talk on planning the farm bathroom at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Senate Group Speeds Action On Bureau Curb

Committee to Send Logan-Walter Plan To Floor Quickly

Ignoring a plea by Senate Majority Leader Barkley for postponement, the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday voted unanimously to speed action on the Logan-Walter bill permitting court appeals from rulings of some 130 Federal agencies.

The action was interpreted at once as a major rebuff to Administration efforts to sidetrack the measure, already approved by the House.

The committee selected a subcommittee to meet Wednesday, draft a few "perfecting" amendments and put the bill in final form for submission to the full committee.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, chairman of the committee, said Barkley presented "very ably" his arguments for postponement of action.

"But I asked each member of the committee individually for his judgment on the matter. The committee was quite militant that we should not dodge this responsibility which the House, by passing the bill, had laid upon us. We will press forward and if any Senators don't like the bill they can vote against it."

Ashurst expressed belief that many amendments will be offered when the issue reaches the Senate floor.

Possibility was seen that a Senate showdown on the Logan-Walter bill might bring a fresh cleavage in Democratic ranks and prolong the session, adjournment of which has been set tentatively for June 1. This possibility, however, failed to lessen the determination of the bill's sponsors to press for a vote.

Pin Lead Taken By Glascoe

One new leader, Jim Glascoe, in Class D singles, marked the start of the final week in the Washington City Duckpin Association tournament last night at Arcadia. Representing the N. F. F. E. League, Glascoe had 373, including a final game of 146.

Ed Blakeney's 402 was good for fifth place in Class A, while Robert Gotshall, also of N. F. F. E., went into third in Class B with 356. J. W. Boyle had 325 for third in Class F.

Columbia's 1,899 total went into third place in the Class A teams. The team also finished third in the District League. Blakeney led his teammates with a 388 set.

A. L. Kelly & Sons had 1,774 for sixth place among Class B teams.

Senators Hit Cotton Crop Insurance Veto

Bankhead Charges President's Action Is 'Discrimination'

Southern Democratic Senators were critical yesterday of President Roosevelt's veto of the Bankhead bill which would have extended to cotton the system of Federal crop insurance now applied experimentally to wheat.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, characterized the veto as a "discrimination" against cotton, adding that he wondered whether the President would advocate the repeal of the crop insurance law as applied to wheat.

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Agriculture Committee, remarked that the veto was influenced by an appraisal of the political factors involved.

"He knows he doesn't have to do anything for the South," said Smith, whom the Administration sought unsuccessfully to "purge" in 1938. "It's in the bag in the November elections."

Because the bill had their support, the veto was a surprise to Agriculture Department officials.

In his veto message, the President pointed out that the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation had just completed one year of experience with wheat crop insurance, and had suffered an impairment in its capital of $1,430,000 over and above the cost of administration and research, which are borne by the Government.

"It seems evident, therefore," he said, "that we do not have as yet an essential 'backlog of experience' required for the establishment of a sound actuarial basis for crop insurance, i. e., for a crop insurance plan that would be fully self-supporting, with premium rates sufficient to cover costs of administration, as well as of indemnities.

"Moreover, when such a plan is established, I think that the producers of all major agricultural crops should share in its benefits."

Agriculture Department officials said cotton crop insurance did not entail the risk which, due to drought, prevails with respect to wheat.

Shriners to See Skaters Tonight

Between 30 and 40 Shriners will visit Baltimore tonight for a preview of the Roller Derby which will be held at Riverside Stadium May 21 to June 15 under the sponsorship of Almas Temple. Potentate Karl Jarrell and Chief Rabban Earl Shinn will head the party to Baltimore.

The Roller Derby craze, which has swept through the United States and extended into Canada and Mexico attracted more than 4,000,000 paid admissions last year. The sport combines the thrills and action of ice hockey, football and six-day bicycle racing. Each team is comprised of five boys and five girls who can average 30 miles an hour on their skates.

Contract Bridge

Courage is a great quality to have in contract bridge, but to be entirely successful it must be tempered by wisdom and caution.

The hand in the box, also from the Olympic, demands a brilliant defensive play by West to set the North-South four-spade bid one trick. How would you plan to accomplish this? The solution follows immediately.

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

	♠ A K Q 6 ♡ K Q 3 ◇ 8 5 3 ♣ 9 7 6
♠ 8 7 5 ♡ A J 10 6 ◇ 10 9 7 ♣ K J 10	NORTH	♠ None ♡ 9 7 5 4 2 ◇ K Q J 2 ♣ Q 5 4 3
	SOUTH ♠ J 10 9 4 3 2 ♡ 8 ◇ A 6 4 ♣ A 8 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇

"East opens the diamond king, declarer can do no better than to win at once, take three rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, then lead the singleton heart. West must see that the only hope is to duck, possibly losing the ace. Declarer has in sight six trump tricks and two side aces. If the play of the heart ace sets up two heart tricks for North, then the contract is sure. Letting North win the first heart surely limits him to one heart trick, and so may defeat the contract."

Declarer loses no hearts, but he cannot develop his second heart honor for the discard he needs in dummy. He will be set, losing two diamonds and two clubs.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

ADVERTISEMENT

Listen! with Slocum

This is quite a year for us broadcasting boys and scattered groups throughout the country are sharpening pencils, drawing up blueprints like mad, and button-holing innocent Republicans and Democrats in the painful process of preparing to cover the conventions of the major parties.

In addition to the conventions there's a war so the master-minds have two major news events to worry about . . . the theoretical problem that they discuss most over their chocolate sodas is: Which broadcast should take precedence if the Republicans or the Democrats are in the midst of the crucial and deciding ballot for the presidential nominee and Herr Hitler and his brain trust are in the midst of bombing London or Paris; or vice versa? Which would you cherished listeners want to hear most?

Hhis business of broadcasting the conventions is more intricate than it seems . . . there are some 40 miles of wires to be laid and 80 or so microphones to get in the right places. The engineering departments of New York, Philadelpria, Chicago and Washington are commissars in charge of that. They, with their colleagues of the other networks, have worked out a plan so that the delegates sitting out in centerfield can be heard even if he's in the last row back. A microphone for every delegation is their motto.

And then there's the matter of what to put on the air . . . as a trend and as an example of the good influence of radio the Republican citizens arranging the conventions have adopted a 30 minute limit on nominating speeches and placed a 5 minute limit on seconding speeches, which you must admit is quite a break for the public but what will the shade of William Jennings Bryan think?

Orphans in Love

by Marion White

"Ellen—do you ever think about—about us?" Not receiving a reply, Peter asked again. "Do you?"

Chapter 1

"Ellen."

"Yes, Peter."

"Do you ever think about—about us?"

The girl's blue eyes widened; she caught her breath in startled dismay. The question embarrassed her, as if Peter had looked into her very soul and read its secret.

She turned aside, pretending to avoid the direct glare of the hot August sun, and her eyes swept over the bright landscape of Tucker's Hill, came to rest on the river below.

She was a lovely girl, vivid and colorful as the summer panorama. Her eyes were true blue, not tinged with green or gray or hazel; they were patches of the sky above, warmed and softened by a vibrant eagerness.

Her hair was not red and not brown, but the gleaming in between shade of highly burnished copper, and now the sunlight danced upon it, highlighting each soft tendril.

Waits for Answer.

The young man looked up, waiting for her answer.

"Do you?" he asked again.

"Of course, Peter," she replied quietly.

It was a most brazen understatement, she thought. Her entire life revolved around Peter Storm; it had always done so, ever since they were children together in the nearby St. Peter's Orphanage.

Every hope, every dream of the future included him as the central theme of the picture.

He lay on his stomach in the grass, leaning on his elbows, and stared vacantly up the hill toward the old Tucker House. His brow was puckered in a frown, he chewed a blade of grass between his teeth.

"I've been out of college for three years," he went on. "I've got a job, and they just gave me another raise, for which I suppose I should be grateful. I'm making $30 a week now."

"Lots of—" Ellen caught herself abruptly. Lots of families, she was about to say, get along on $30 a week.

She changed it. "Lots of men are making less," she said without enthusiasm.

"What does it get them? Where do they live? What have they got to offer their families?"

Flings Grass

He flung the stem of grass from him impatiently. "Imagine spending your life in a stuffy $30 flat! I tell you, Ellen, a man has no right talking—no, not even thinking about such things until he's making a hundred dollars a week. At least a hundred!"

She kept her face averted, so that he could not see the quick despair which darkened her eyes. This was what always come between them—this wild, extravagant ambition of Peter's.

A man must have a million dollars, or at least a tremendous unfailing promise, before he spoke of the things within his heart. She did not think that way at all. If two people had love—

"I want worth-while things," Peter was saying. "A real home."

He glanced up the hill, and his eyes dwelt on the old house above them, as if it held some special significance. For years it had stood there, silent and deserted, a sentry of time-honored traditions and triumphs.

Proud Heritage

Time had darkened the shingles and stained the copper cornices, but it had not erased the proclamation of proud heritage.

Ellen, following his gaze, knew what he was thinking. He had often spoken of it.

"Peter, you're so—so extreme! People don't have homes like this nowadays. Not in New York, anyway. Who wants a whole hilltop to himself? It's silly—"

"No, it isn't. Not to me, at any rate. All through the years, the house has been like a symbol to me, a challenge. You don't understand."

"Yes, I do, Peter. I love it, too. I've loved it ever since I was a child. I could see it from the window of our dormitory, brightened by moonlight at night. I used to go to sleep dreaming about it.

"When I knew that nobody lived here, I pictured the Huckers coming home at last, driving up to the doorway. Whenever I sit here on the hill side, just watching the house like this, I feel as if I'm waiting for that moment.

"I expect to see every window snap open by magic, to see the wide front doorway throw back its doors in welcome, to hear the echo of gay voices and light music . . . That's just pretending, Peter. We've all pretended about homes, and families . . . but my goodness, I never expected to live here. I'd as soon expect to move into Grant's Tomb."

Peter shook his head doggedly. "I wasn't pretending. I meant it. I still want the finest house on the hill, and the first place in the community. I've got to want it, Ellen. Don't you see? That's the only way to get things, to want and want so badly that you never give up."

"But not the impossible things—"

"There are no impossible things. We make things seem impossible because we're too lazy to go after them. We're too soft. That's all right, maybe, for fellows who have everything. Suppose I was born to a house like this. Well, then I'd belong. I'd have a place in the world. This way—it's different.

Auctioneers' Chant to Open Leaf Season

New Warehouses To Deal in Southern Maryland Tobacco

The chant of the tobacco auctioneer will be heard again today in southern Maryland, opening the 1940 marketing season.

Tobacco experts say this year will decide the fate of the auction system, which was started a year ago in opposition to the Baltimore market.

Backers of the new method of marketing (also known as the loose leaf system) have invested more than $300,000 in new sales floors and warehouses, despite rumblings of dissatisfaction among the growers.

New Markets Built

Last year the only marketing centers were at Upper Marlboro, in Prince Georges County, and at Hughesville, in Charles County. This year markets and warehouses have been built at Waldorf and La Plata, Charles County.

In addition, marketing facilities at Upper Marlboro and Hughesville have been increased. Edelen Bros., Baltimore commission merchants, have a giant new market under construction at Marlboro, but are not ready for the opening of the season today.

However, the Marlboro Tobacco Market has increased its floor space by 10,000 square feet; E. J. O'Brien Co., nationally known dealers, have erected a $20,000 warehouse at Upper Marlboro; Peter Duball, a packer, has enlarged his plant, and the Maryland Tobacco Packing Corporation has constructed a warehouse.

Plant at Hughesville

At Hughesville, Mott Robertson, of Lynchburg, Va., has built a new sales house and Crosby Wyehe's market will open for its second season.

Edelen Bros. have built a sales house at La Plata and the O'Brien firm has constructed a packing plant. New marketing facilities at Waldorf include a packing plant recently completed by Winstead & Co., of Baltimore, and a sales house built by the Keel firm, of Greenville, N. C.

Pointing to these extensive preparations, supporters of the auction system claim this season will be more successful than last year year when 7,000,000 pounds were sold from the Upper Marlboro and Hughesville floors.

Baltimore Agreements

On the other hand, Baltimore market backers contend the majority of growers have signed agreements to bolt the new markets and ship their crops in hogsheads to Baltimore. At a recent series of meetings sponsored by the Farm Bureau chapters in the five tobacco belt counties, the Baltimore market was favored by overwhelming vote.

Opponents of the auction system claim it will deprive the grower of his bargaining power and force him to take whatever the buyers choose to offer. In Baltimore, the growers are permitted to store their hogsheads at warehouses without charge until the price offered is acceptable.

First Lady Wins Bridle-Path Along Airport

By Edward Ryan

Mrs. Roosevelt's liking for an early morning horseback ride down the Virginia edge of the Potomac has helped save for other Washington riding fans a big interest in the new Gravelly Point Airport, it was reported yesterday.

A new plan has been drafted, it was learned, to permit running a bridle path around the outer edge of the airport, instead of turning riders inland along the highway and away from the river.

As a result, Gravelly Point, besides giving the Capital a model airport, will give riders a 3-mile sweep, almost at the water's edge, and, incidentally, out of sight of the landing field.

Mrs. Roosevelt was said to be among the first supporters of the new plan. The ride south from Fort Myer, where the White House horses are kept, along the George Washington Memorial Parkway, has long been her favorite.

"Persons with fine, clear voices who can enunciate and pronunciate very clearly and distinctly" are wanted by the Federal playhouse, but officials won't say why. "It's a mystery," said Lee Shugar, spokesman for the organization. The voice tests will be given tonight in the Thomson School, Twelfth and L streets northwest.

The story of a woman Government worker who reported she was driven to attempt suicide as a result of trouble with her supervisor will be told Thursday to the special Senate committee investigating the Civil Service, it was announced yesterday.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, said he plans to inquire into this and other cases of "pressure" on employes. The woman's story, it was said, told of steady demotions, of supervisors who "picked on her," a nervous breakdown, a row in which she slapped her supervisor, and finally an attempt to take her own life.

The hearings will go over some ground covered in 12 days of open inquiry into alleged "petty tyranny" last year. The written record of those hearings, in which nearly 40 Government workers voiced their complaints, will run into four volumes, and will be available during the next few days.

Officials of the U. F. W. A., after signatures supporting Senator Mead's five-day 35-hour week for Government employes, are running into trouble, with employes who won't sign because of the Hatch act.

With their petitions they are reaching now for the Civil Service Commission's political activity pamphlet, citing the Constitution and an act of 1912 as insuring that civil service employes can sign the blanks.
